hours at prayers, do will not the taileman, and defy your weapon. To-morrow morning, at eight o'clock, I will allow you to fire at his in the presence of these Arabs, who wore witnesses of your challenge. "" Hou-Alienan, astonished at such a promise, seked me once again if this offer wore sorious, and if he should invite the company for the appointed hour. On my affirmative, they agreed to meet be-fore the stone bouch I have already alluded to. "I'dld not spand noy night at prayers, as may, "So supposed, but T employed about two hours in insuring my invulvierability ; thon, satisfied with the result, I slopt sonnally, for I was terribly tired. "By eight the noxt inorning we had break fasted, our horses were addled, and our escort was await-ing the signal for our departure, which would take place after the famons experiment. "None of the guests were absort, and, indeed;" a great number of Arabs semio in to swell the orowd. a grat humber of Arabs came in to swell the crowd. "The platois were handed me; I called attention to the fact flat the vents were clear, and the Ma-rabout put in a fair charge of powder and drove the wad home. Among the bullets produced, I chose one which I coperly put in the plated, and which was then also everyal with paper. "The Arab watched all these mevoments, for his home, was at stake. "Wo went through the same process with the second pistol, and the colemn moment arrived. "Bolemn indeed, it seemed to everybody; to Madame Houdin, who had in vair beseight mo to give up this trick, for she feared the result; and solemn also to me, for as my new trick din ot de-pend on any of the arrangements made at Algiers, I foared an error, an act of treachery-I knew not what. what. "Still I posted myself at fiftcen paces from the sheik, without evincing the slightest emotion. "The Marsbout immediately seized one of the "the hard on my giving the signal, took a delipistols, and, on my giving the signal, took a deli-berate aim at me. berate aim at me. "The pistol wont off, and the ball appeared be-tween my teels. "More angry than over, my rival tried to seize the other pistol; but I succeeded in reaching it be-fore him the other pistol; but I succeeded in reaching it be-fore him. "You could not injure me,' I said to him, 'but you shall now see that my aim is more dangerous than yours. Look at that wall." "I pulled the trigger, and on the newly-white-washed wall there appeared a large patch of blood, oxacity at the spot where I had aimed. "The Marabont went up to it, dipped his flager in the blood, and, raising it to his mouth, convinced himself of the reality. When he acquired this cortainty, his arms fell, and his head was bowed on his chest, as if he were annihilated. "I was objectators raised their eyes to heaven, mut-tered prayers, and regarded me with a species of torror. n 1857, : torror. "This scene was a triumpliant termination to my performance." I therefore retired, leaving the au-dience under the impression I had produced. We took leave of Bou-Allom and his son, and set off at a callon. took loave of bourness and the second of bourness and the second of the bullet-mould. "I took a card, bont up the four edges and thus made a sort of trough, in which I placed a piece of wax taken from one of the candles. When it was melted, I mixed with it a little lamp-black I had obtained by putting the black of a knife over the candle, and then ran the composition in the bul-let-mould. pain, and I employed it on this occasion to fift my-bullot. "Bullots thus propared boar an extraordinary resomblence to load, and are easily mistaken for that metal when seen a short distance off. ""With this explanation the trick will be easily understood. After showing the loaden bullot to the spectators, I changed it for my hollow ball, and openly put the latter into the pistel. By press-ing the wad tightly down, the way broke into small pieces; and could not touch me at the dis-tance I stood." "At the moment the pistel was freed I opened my mouth to display the lead bullet I held between my toath, while the other pistel continued the bullet filled with blood, which bursting against the wall, loft is is imprint, though the wax had flown to atoms." In his retirement at Blois M. Houpin is de voting himself to electrical discovery, and promises to produce another book in which he will fully relate how the various sleight-ofhand tricks are done. We repeat the question, why does not some American publisher reproduce the Autobiography of this ingenious and surprising man ?
