Here we may state that Mr. Bonner actually paid $5,000 to Mr. Dickens for the etory called "Hunted Down." which lately ran through three imbers of the New York Ledger. It occupied about seven columns, altogether, in the Ladger, and was really not nearly so good as Emerson Bennett would have written. The subject is old, being the case of Wainwright, the English artist-author, who insured the lives of his relatives and friends, and poisoned them off to get the money promised b the policies. Bulwer, it may be remembered, founded his novel of "Lucretia" on this actual

What is Mr. De Quincey's real patronymie? The correspondent of a Manchester paper writes thus: "Sir-Sixty-five years ago come December, I was apprenticed to the drug business in the shop now occupied by Mr. Gibbons in Market-street lane. The adjoining premises, now Messrs. Thom-son, booksellers, was then a warehouse, the firm in the fields, in the neighborhe rnbrook, separating the road from the ground I wish to ask you if you think you are correct in adding 'De' to the name Quincey? I know De Quincey, the Opium Eater, talls us he spent his early days here, at Greenbeys; but that addition to the name was not used at the time to which I have alluded, so far as it came to my hearing August 25, 1859. P.S. I always thought the 'De' directory that we have at hand, that of 1797." £1,000.
