Editorial Correspondence. ALLENTOWN AGRICULTURAL FAIR. Mr Dean Mn. II—: The avecations of your office, as foreman of The Press, have allowed you small opportunities, I know, for travelling through this great State of Pennsylvania, and judging for yourself of its multitudinous resources, its wonderful variety of natural productions, its mechanical and agricultural ingenuity and industry, its "fair and agricultural beauty and productions, and the state of the women and brave men," who are quietly, but surely, building up competence, if not wealth, for them-selves and for their families. A fellow-worker, like yourself, I have been more fortunate, having occasionally visited various districts in the State, and thus been enabled to judge for myself, with my own ears, and through my own spotacles, of people and of things—of sequiring such informa-tion, by personal observation, as neither books nor newspapers, all-instructive as they are, can pos-

Let me inflict my tediousness upon you, respecting what came under my notice yesterday, when I was at the great Agricultural Fair at Allentown, the capital of Lehigh county, and, this day, through Berks county, and in Reading, its beautiful metropolis. I write this from Major Lauman's, in Reading, on this blessed Friday—for though I shall return this evening, I need scarcely tell you that the labor of looking through, and, on Captain Cuttle's principle, of "making a note of" even two days' arrears of newspaper correspondence, would ren. der it impossible to write a line after returning to Philadelphia. True: I might follow contemporary example, and throw the subject over until our Mon day's paper, but as The Press happens to be a live journal, I prefer disposing of it, thus and now, for to-morrow's publication. Of all abominable things, in the wide region of newspaperdom, old news is to my mind, the most repulsive, annoying, and use

Colonel Forney and myself started from Phila delphia, yesterday morning at half past 9, and, borne on the irresistible wings of steam, were railwayed to the beautiful Lehigh river, opposite Bethlehem, a little after 11 A. M. A pleasant journey, with conversable compagnous du voyage, (we had a bright eyed lady with us), made the time pass rapidly on, and, even without a spoken word, there was ample cause for reflection and ad-miration over the beautiful scenes through which we were rapidly whirled along. Fine weather good company, and a lovely country, after a good breakfast—there are worse combinations on earth than this, I can tell you. But what is the use of inflicting this truism, mon cher II—, who have an enjoyable nature, and (if you only had time for it) would go in for all these things, or any of them, as well as any man in the world?

A change of cars in view of Bethlehem, which is on the opposite side of the Lehigh, and certainly more decided incursion—no, an avalanche of pe ple, chiefly of the softer sex, into the cars to Allentown, only a few miles distant, the rapid Lehigh at the right hand as you proceed. The quantity of femininity in those cars was extraordinary, and the conductor informed us that, from the earliest hour in the morning, there had been a constant stream of humanity flowing into the cars, and that it was expected this supply would continue uninterrupted all through the day. Whoover pleases, may say, with "glorious John Dryden,"

"Old as I am, for dalliance all unfit, The power of Beauty I remember yet." and undoubtedly this power was in the ascendant, and undoubtedly this power was in the ascendant, that there is no danger of a collision between the that morning. Such a galaxy of bright eyes and beaming faces, which the said eyes illumine, it has was therefore altogether unnecessary to send the their speaking mobilité-for the want of beauty. There were recoons and kittens in one cage. There were Shanghaes to any extent, with smaller but more profitable domestic fowl; and there might be seen, also, a black turkey-cock, weighing forty pounds, accompanied by one of his harem, a darkfeathered turkeysine, which weighed nineteen, Neither, in this glance at the fair, must the agri-cultural machines be omitted. They abounded, in all shapes and sizes, for all uses and purposes. One youngster, a human biped, curiously testing the efficiency of a machine for cutting food for cattle, had the fingers of our hand cleanly shaven off, and raised a terrible outery at the catastrophe.

al recitation, ending with an Indian melody, this were two comic scenes between Miss and Mr. Richings—one a duct from "The Daughter of the Regiment," and the other Fiorovanti's singing lesson. Two or three Scotch and one Irish ballads were also greatly applauded, as was " La Manda " Henrion's French chanzonette. But the finest charmingly dressed, and looked extre was repeatedly encored, and sang with good voice and in good spirits. She was to give a concert at Pottsville to-day, and Reading expects a similar favor from her to-morrow (i. e. Saturday) evening. Mr. Jarvis played very well on the piano, but somehow as if he was indifferent as to how he played. Allentown, which has had the best Fair in the State, is a wonderfully thriving and improving place. Were some factories introduced, and a great city. Its population is about cleven to twelve thousand. It has several newspapers, and the latest issue of these is called "The Allentonian, devoted to choice Literature, Romance, and the News." The first number, dated October 22d was hurried out to be in time for the Fair. It is really a pleasant, readable, racy hebdomadal, and I was assured, is actually got up by school-boys, not one of whom has turned his eighth year! It such be the loys of Lehigh county, what will its men be? After the concert, a visit to Mr. King's, a vote ran politician, living next the Court-house—which visit I should not notice here, but because, during its occurrence, there was a Backgammon Tourns-ment, in which, out of six rubbers, contested with terrible energy and great skill, somebody won five Naturally modest, I do not mention the conqueror' name. Popular Confectionery Establishment. - TREV. PETER CARTWRIGHT, FOR 56 POPULUE CONFECTIONERY ESTABLISHMENT.

Most of our readers are probably acquainted with to well-known confectionery establishment of Messre. 16. Whitman & Co., Second street, below Chestant. If they are, they know that it is the place of all others to obtain confectionery in its greatest richness and purity? If they are not, we advise them to make its acquaintance without delay, as there are both wisdom and pleasure in treating the palate to things that are most palateable, and at the same time most conductive to health, and especially when such may be obtained at no higher cost than is demanded for ordinary goods.

A CURIOSITY SOLD .- The Natural Bridge in Virginia has been sold to John Lustre for the sum o $12,000. Next to the Falls of Niagara, it is the greates unitural currioutly in the United States, slightly surpassing in interest the "Continental Clothing House" o Eighth streets, although by no means conducing to gra-tify the comfort and convenience of the people. "A Young Man Idde, an Old Man Needy," is sure to follow. Franklin says: "Application is youth makes old are comfortable," as he experienced and as many who deposit in the Old Franklin Sax Fund, No 136 South Fourth street, below Chestnut, wil our witness.
