A Maidente Shlitoany ON A MUSICIAN'S OFFER OF MARRIAGE. BY THE BARD OF TOWER HALL.

There is a fine Musician—one
Who would my husband be:
He wrote upon a "Music Shoot,"
Oh! will you marry me?"
I have his "Suxayure," and love
My heart to him heined noted he,
If seen in "Ledger lines,"
To hold a sacred place;
If in that heart there is a void,
My love should fill the "Space,"
But will the music of his Toxes
Be in my heart the same,
And not be turned to discords, if
I take his profered name?
I I'm a "mar," the fact may mar If I'm a " mar," the fact may mar
The singing of the wifeThe taby, as a "GRACE NOTE," may Untune the "Pasim of Life." With "mother's darling," there'll be three, And it may be inferred, That in the matrimonial "Scale" [Til be a "MINOR THERD"] "I'll be n. "MINOR THIRD"

I'll "Bar," the thought, for I should wish
To be his "better hail,"
On him to be my "Stays."

II not in "Txxoh" of his ways.

II not he "Txxoh" of his ways.

II not he "Txxoh" of his ways.

I could not him em. "Barax." faults,
I could not him em. "Barax." faults,
I to the please him to a "Dor."

He then may cast a "Stur,"
And say: "The Jade, I'll break at once
The "Tix or Bind" with her."

With such a "Groychtz" in his head.

The Tig of Blad with for.

With such a "CROTCHET" in his head,
My heart would have no "REST"—
I will not "QUAVER," but will "TURN"
This matter in my breast.
I'll take an "INTENAL" of Time
To think of this and that—
1 shall not be "NATURAL,"
Nor shall I be a "FLAT." But I'll be "SHARP," and will not wed Unless with one it be Who will in Love's sweet melodies, A "KET-NOTE" make of me. A MET-NOTE make of me.

If that I really though the'd do,
I could not him discard;
I'd send to him. "AMERICA."

The Song by Bennett's Bard;
And on that sheet. I highly prize,
I'd write him this reply"I'm your, if at the Tower Hall
You will your Clothing buy."

an enterprising merchant, was driven from the window. After a great deal of trouble he made his way to the window, when he was stabbed with awis, and his calls on the police for protection were unheeded. So painfal was the infliction of the wounds that he was obliged to get out of the crowd as best he could. He promptly complained to the mayor.

"After night there was a great deal of shooting from Bond and French streets. A man dressed in finale apparal walked up Bath street nearly to the bridge, and fired a gun at several persons on the opposite side, which was returned by several shots, none of which, however, took serious effect, though there was a track of blood from Holliday street through Pleasant to Calvert street. A swivel was fired from the west side of the bridge, one of the missiles of which entered the second story of the houve on the corner of Front and French streets, and broke crockery on the support table while the family were sitting around."

Banks on the Jesutts.—Gov. Banks, in his Michigan oration, thus referred to the Jesuit Fathers, who explored the Northwest when the red man was its monarch. He said: "Nor are the agonts of this miraculous period of human privilege less remarkable than the theatre of the exploits, or the events of their history. because he could not be forced to abjure Northern national polley, against the insolent sectionalism of slavery. His slayer, Terry, opposed his election on this simple ground, that he was a Northern man. The Ban Francisco Times, edited by C.A. Washburn, formerly of Maine, brother of the three members of Congress of that name, represents this feeling of indignation against the conspiracy to which Mr. Broderick has fallen a victim. In order to show you how they war is conducted over the dead body of Patroclus, I send you an article from the Times, and one from the National in reply. The National is redited by the clerk of the United States Cirents Court, a Federal office of great influence, and a brother of the collector of the port. Your readers will persoive its savage and malignant spirit, and they will at once perseive that it is intended to cortor a challenge from Mr. Washburn. The person thus attempting to throw the methes of Southern ern personal tacties around Mr. Washburn. The person thus attempting to throw the methes of Southern ern personal tacties around Mr. Washburn last year killed the foremost friend of Mr. Broderick in a duel. He is thirsting for the blood of another "infamous Abolitionist," as it is the custom smong his class to designate Republicans. Mr. Ferguson, slain by this man last year, was a very popular anti-Lecompton Democrate, but the Southern slavery politicians have but one name for all opponents they are Abolitionists or Black Republicans.

The Southern duellist are clusted to the use of the pistot. They practice with it as an amusement. They go to the field with the confidence based on skill and dexterity. When they find a Northern man whom they cannot dragoon into a recruit for slavery, they pick a quarrel with him; and a hostile meeting is the result, in which the chances are all on one side. Thus Gilbert, Perguson, and many others, the highest and best intellects of this State, have been slain, and thus Senator Broderick has been added to the list of victims. The murderers, for HRENAY AND BUCHANAN. The New York Heraid of Thursday having published an account of a recent meeting, between the two prize fighters, Morrissey and Heenan, in which they were repr tented to have behaved in a decidedly belligerent nanner : towards . each other, Heenan called at the friendly character, and related altogether to cera monthly character, and related altogether to certain wagers between them. The Herald says:

"The reporter suggested that Mr. Heenan should write a note embracing the points of his statement.

"HEENAN. Oh, no; I am fired of these cards.

"HEEVAX. Oh, no; I am fired of these cards. I have written as many cards lately as James Buchanan, and I don't want to write any mare. I am as public acharacter how as James Buchanan, and I don't like it. It is not right, either, to be representing me as having been brought up to Syracuse by Captain Rynders. The captain denied the statement, and showed how he made the mistake in what he said rogarding me.

"The reporter, at Mr. Heenan's request promised that he would have the matter set right; and the Benicia Boy and his friend left the office apparently well satisfied."

The Democratic State Convention in New Hampshies.—At the recent Democratic State Con-HAMPSHIRE.—At the recent Democratic State Con presided. On taking the chair, he made an energetic speech, in which he affirmed in emphatic terms the doctrine of Popular Sovereignty. The Democracy of New Hampshire had no idea of playing the despot over the people of the Territories. They recognised the fact that Territorial fellow-citizens were of the same spirit with the citizens of the States. The Territorial people can take care of themselves and their own affair They have sufficient capacity to form and regulate their own domestic institutions in their own way, nd let them do it unbiased and untrammelled. 1
