The name of the railroad heretefore known as the "New Albany and Salem" has been charged by the directors to that of the "Louisville, New Albany, and Chicago Railroad."

The completion of the Louisville and Nashville railroad will bring to Louisville a large amount of Southern travel, a pertion of which, on its way to Chicago and other points North, will pass over the New Albany road. To obtain this, and the more directly to associate in the public mind the close connection of Louisville with the road, this change of name has been made.
