For his clumsiness he was committed to prison.

The inflation of Mr. Lowe's great transatiantic balloon is progressing in New York. The New York Evening Post says that the projector has received about five hundred applications for the privilege of venturing with him on the attempted trip to Europe, while the applicants have to pay from one hundred to fifteen hundred dollars for the chance. The backet, which will be the abode of the aeronauts during the voyage, attracts considerable attention. It is lined both in the bottom and sides with carpet, and with the net work of ropes extending above it, appears like a huge bird's nest hidden among the slight branches of a willow bush. It is not as large, however, as the pictorial illustrations that have been published would lead one to suppose. The inflation will been found to contain poisonous drugs. We compy several days, and the inflated balloon will meet with cases of deaths from adulterated

It seems that when Mr. Hanns [a reporter of the Sun] entered the apartment, he accested Mr. Harcount with the sistal familiarity, and some words passed between them which were offensively construed on one side or the other. Platois were drawn and fiourished, but at present we cannot understand whether in jost, bravado, or anger; a scuffle ensued, in which a pistol was discharged, the shot from which struck Mr. McPhail, wounding him as already stated. From Mr. James McPhail, brother of the geniteman wounded, we learn that the lattor, when discharged was in the hands of Mr. Harcourt, which agrees with Mr. Hanna's statement. And further, that Mr. J. G. Wilmot, apparently with the intention of preventing Mr. Harcourt from using it sgainst Hanna, seized the pistol arm, and in turning it said, the wapon was discharged, and the wound thus indicted. This agrees with Hanna's statement, who says that when Mr. Harcourt turning the said, the wapon was discharged, and the wound thus indicted. Soon afterwards, as the feeling excited by the occurrence seemed directed against him, advised by some one, present, Mr. Hanna withdrew. Arrangements were subsequently made for his surrender to the authorities, and at an early hour this morning he gave himself into the custody of Marshal Horring.

As he was exceedingly anxious to have the direct testimony of Mr. McPhail in his bebalf, he waived examination until that could be obtained; and, therefore, now remains in castody. We carnestly hope that Mr. McPha

Adulterated Liquors.

We alluded several days ago to the recent case in Lancaster county, in which a liquor merchant lost a suit to recover the price of a barrel of "Pure rye whiskey," because the defendant showed that it was an adulterated article. Since then, we learn that the practice of testing liquor in Lancaster county, by various processes, has been frequently resorted to, and some very "superior articles" have been found to contain poisonous drugs. "What is lightly won goes lightly, it is said—but the purchase-money of Mount Vernon is associated with personal searchices, on the part of those women who have acted as collectors, so great as to insure its prudent use and careful keeping. It has been gathered in Massachusetts from the hard-handed inborer and the school-olid—from the old woman who remembered Washington, and from the young girl who sacrifieed her vanity on the altar of feeling. Occasionally, and in response to personal appeals which could not gracefully be set axide, the gifts of the wealthy cheered the dim prospect; but, in general, the purchase-money may be said to be the gift of the poorer classes—certainly of persons of limited means, and with heavy demands on their puress.

After three meffectual shots the par-ties agreed to shake hands, and returned to their General Jackson's duel with Dickinson which resulted in the death of the latter, was forced upon the former, Dickinson being one of the most expert duellists in the Southern country. It is stated that although Jackson was wounded by Dickinson, he behaved with such coolness that his seconds did not know he was hurt until he got nto the carriage. The duel between Gen. Den ver, late Commissioner of Indian Affairs, and ormer Representative in Congress from Califor nis, and Hon. Edward Gilbert, in 1852, resulting in the death of the latter, grew out of an article in the Alta California, of which Mr. Gilbert was the editor, censuring John Bigler, then Governor of the State. They fought with rifles, and

I might extend this list through columns, but I cent events, and by the apprehension which exists in some minds that public questions may end in private broils during the coming session of Congress. This all good men ought to unite in pre venting. Not merely personal, but public reasons should inspire the representatives of the people in both Houses to cultivate the kindest feelings towards each other. The habit of charging Northern men with want of spirit has heretofore pro luced, and may hereafter produce, bad blood. The Southern custom has, no doubt, elevated the duel into a tribunal which is acknowledged, if not rewhat disreputable in the free States; but I have yet to see the man, from any quarter of the country, feeling his responsibilities as a gentleman and a legislator, who can justly be called a coward. Some of the most intropid men are to be found among the ultra anti-slavory leaders—man who will not go to the field of "honor," but who are mite ready to defend themselves when attacked : and it is due to the truth to say that not a few of those who are so foud of resorting to the pistol or the bowie knife fall off in the great essential of Another coupon attached to our bonds, matures to day. As default will be made in the payment, we should lose no time in complying with the formalities which are necessary to give us possession of our property. By the terms of the mortgages, it is requisite that in thirty days after such default, formal domand be made by bondholders to the smound of $50,000, upon the trustees, requiring them to notify the company that they will take possession of the chattels in six months. The delay to which we are thus subjected was manifestly intended for the benefit of the company, and contemplated its probable ability to heal the default by payment within the period named. Under present circumstances, no such expectation can be entertained, and if those representing us have power to act promptly in any emergency, it is not likely that other parties besides the company will be permitted to make use of this provision of the mortgages to our disadvantage. It is understood that a majority of the first-mortgage bondholders have united, and are detormined to enforce their legal rights without delay. The beard of managers, by formal action, have resolved not to interfers with this attempt. It is, therefore, not unlikely that the time for prompt action on the part of our representatives in not very far distant.

Mr. Morphy during his stay played two gemes with Mr. W. G. Thomas, one of our strongest players, at the odds of a familit. Mr. Thomas won the two kames, at which is the property of the control of the control of the country of the control of the country of the country. Great anxiety was felt by several fulfidelphians to have a match between Mr. Morphy and Mr. H. P. Mont-comer, of this city. Mr. Montgomery confessedly standard the head of chess players in this city, and in fact he has few equals in the country. He had frequently expressed his readiness to play Mr. Morphy, and will be controlled the recome yesterday with the intention of the country of the countr ye'd has determination in favor of the gallant Philadel-phian.

As the play stands now, or, at least, as it exhibited it-sell yesterday, Mr. Thomas has made a better stand a sinst Mr. Morphy than any of the players of New-ylork or Boston. The superiority of Philadelphia in chess matters is so decided that, with all Mr. Morphy's fume, his wonderful experience, and his schowled; ed-surichary in the world of chess, we have no doubt he will have a difficult time in conquering such men as really hope that he will be the more than the man really hope that he will be the more than the man really hope that he will be the more than the con-mery can be existinghed. But one was exists of estab-lebulations appendix and that my actual trial. That Mr. Morphy anould refuse to Mr. Montromery, an Ame-rican was the conceded to Anderson and flarents, fo-retuner, is certainly, to our minds, somewhat very strange. named by the bondholders themselves, and would suggest that three gentlemen, of practical experience, be chosen by the meeting, and their names inserted in the power of attorney.

Respectfully submitted.

JOSEPH HARRISON, Jr., Chairman Committee Chattel Bondholders.
