MEDICINAL.

MRS. WINSLOW,
AN EXPERIENCED NURSE AND FEMALE Physician, presents to the attention of mothers her
SOOTHING SYRUP
FOR CHILDREN TEETHING, which greatly facilitates the process of teething, by softening the gums, reducing all inflammation; will allay ALL PAIN and spasmodic action, and is SURE TO REGULATE THE BOWELS.
Depend upon it, mothers, it will give rest to yourselves and
RELIEF AND HEALTH TO YOUR INFANTS.
We have put up and sold this article for over ten years, and can say, in confidence and truth of it, what we have never been able to say of any other medicine, NEVER HAS IT FAILED IN A SINGLE INSTANCE TO EFFECT A CURE, when timely used. Never did we know an instance of dissatisfaction by any one who used it. On the contrary, all are delighted with its operations, and commendation of its magical effects and medical virtues in the highest terms we think proper to speak. In fact, we never knew a medicine that gave such universal satisfaction. We speak in this matter what we do know, after ten years experience, and do not hesitate to recommend to the public. In almost every instance where the infant is suffering from pain and exhaustion, relief will be found in fifteen or twenty minutes after the Syrup is administered.
This valuable preparation is the prescription of one of the most EXPERIENCED and SKILFUL NURSES in New England, and has been used with never-failing success in THOUSANDS OF CASES.
It not only relieves the child from pain, but invigorates the stomach and bowels, corrects acidity, and gives tone and energy to the whole system. It will almost instantly relieve GRIPING IN THE BOWELS AND WIND COLIC, and overcome convulsions, which, if not speedily remedied, end in death. We believe it the best and surest remedy in the world, in all cases of DYSENTERY and DIARRHŒA IN CHILDREN, whether it arises from teething or from any other cause. We would say to every mother who has a child suffering from any of the foregoing complaints, do not be prejudiced against the use of this medicine, if you have any confidence in what we say, relief is sure—yea, ABSOLUTE CERTAIN—and no mistake. If the directions for using will accompany each bottle, bearing the fac simile of CURTIS & PERKINS, New York, is on the outside wrapper.
Sold by Druggists throughout the world. Principal Office, No. 13 GOLDEN Street, New York.
Price 25 cents a bottle.

SILVER WARE.

WM. WILSON & SON
Invite special attention to their stock of SILVER WARE, which is now unusually large, affording a variety of pattern and design unsurpassed by any house the United States, and of finer quality than is manufactured for table use in any part of the world.
Our Standard of Silver is 925-1000 parts pure
The English Sterling.....920-1000 "
" American and French.....900-1000 "
Thus it will be seen that we give thirty-five parts purer than the American and French coin, and ten parts purer than the English Sterling. We melt all our own Silver, and our Foreman being connected with the Refining Department of the United States Mint for several years, we guarantee the quality as above (925), which is the finest that can be made to be serviceable, and will resist the action of acids much better than the ordinary Silver manufactured.

Thomas Paine.*

The subject of enthusiastic eulogy on one hand and of energetic abuse on the other, THOMAS PAINE has been roughly dealt with. For while his polemical writings have been almost universally condemned, his political productions have somewhat been under estimated. Yet, he was, undoubtedly, a leading writer in his time, and did good service to the great cause of National Independence by his pen. The motive which induced him to write on the side of struggling liberty in America may be questioned, but the effect which he produced was great. He seems to have had very little principle; to have had an eye to full payment for his work, even while patriotically professing the utmost disinterestedness; to have been actuated by caprice, passion, and personal feeling. But his pamphlet, entitled "Common Sense" was as well-timed as it was well-written. It told bold truths at a moment when their utterance was needed. It was trenchant in tone and plain in language, so that the most unlearned could understand it. The writer was petulant, vain, selfish, and almost free from what is called moral principle, but he did that work well. It has been doubted whether he was earnest in his advocacy of the cause which he espoused, but nobody can doubt that he wrote earnestly, as if he indeed were fully possessed with the inspiration of truth. Nor can any one fairly say that he did not desire the success of the American cause.

More than half a century ago, THOMAS PAINE died. So much unpopularity remains attached to his name, from his later works against the Holy Bible, and from the profligacy of his closing years, that few have cared dispassionately to discuss his entire life—to do justice to his services to this country, ere he sank into the discredit which is likely ever to be attached to his name. Mr. WILLIAM A. STOKES, of Greensburg, an eminent lawyer and an eloquent orator, has had the moral courage to "point a moral" from the example of this man, and to speak openly and fairly of him to the inquiring alumni of Franklin and Marshall College, Lancaster. It is neither a partial defence nor a full condemnation of PAINE. It is an exposition—showing for what he merits public acknowledgment, and principally dealing with him outside of his irreligion. Mr. STOKES has executed his difficult purpose with tact as well as with ability, and we accept his Address as a contribution to the Historical annals of a great and stirring epoch. We shall follow him closely in what we here shall write, sometimes using his ipsissima verba, feeling that we could not improve upon them.

THOMAS PAINE was son of a Quaker staymaker, in the east of England. Originally he received only a scanty education, but was a man entitled to boast, as he did, that he had seldom passed five minutes of his life, however circumstanced, in which he did not acquire some information. He had been to sea in a privateer, had worked at his father's business, and had successively been an exciseman, usher at a school, dissenting preacher, grocer, and pamphleteer, before he made the acquaintance of Dr. FRANKLIN, then colonial agent in London, who advised him to proceed to America. He arrived in Philadelphia in the winter of 1774, and was then thirty-seven years old. He became editor of the Pennsylvania Magazine, and, Mr. STOKES adds:

"He now had access to books, and the dormant energies of his mind were aroused. He eagerly embraced the cause of the colonies, and was soon to act an important and meritorious part in the coming conflict."

In his conduct of the magazine, PAINE showed so much ability as to attract the favorable notice of Dr. RUSH, and other literati of the city. It was thought desirable that a popular work should be written, fairly and boldly, from the American side of the quarrel with England. PAINE was encouraged to write, and, in January, 1776, published the remarkable pamphlet of "Common Sense." Mr. STOKES says:

"Admirable as was the execution of this work, it was not written spontaneously, but at the suggestion of Dr. Rush, who read the sheets as they were composed, as did also Dr. Franklin and Samuel Adams. The former struck from the manuscript what seems a telling sentence, 'A greater absurdity cannot be conceived of, than three millions of people running to their sea coast, every time a ship arrives from London, to know what portion of liberty they should enjoy.' When the manuscript was ready for the press, Paine projected to call it 'Plain Truth,' but Dr. Rush objected, and gave it the title of 'Common Sense.' Many years afterwards, General Washington applied the title of the book to its author, and spoke of the merits and services of 'Common Sense' as unrewarded by this country.

"Certain it is that an instant and immense impetus was given to the cause of independence by the then unknown pamphleteer. The desire of the people for the immemorial liberties of their ancestors gave place to a determination to free themselves forever from foreign domination, and submission to a King was exchanged for resolution to establish a Republic."

The pamphlet had vast circulation and wide influence, for it said what the masses thought. Its character is thus concisely given by Mr. STOKES:

"Whon 'Common Sense' was published a great blow was struck. It was felt from New England to the Carolinas, it resounded throughout the world. Principles of politics were proclaimed, not new, but hitherto concealed in books unknown to the public; principles which found instant recognition in the natural sense of justice which God implants in all His creatures; arguments were adduced which went right home to the understanding, and found there immediate reception. Common sense—the best kind of sense, without which knowledge is vain—eagerly embraced and appropriated the cogent reasons and conclusions of this master-piece of popular reasoning, which rather aroused what already lay deep down in the hidden recesses of the human mind, than communicated any strange sentiments. The boldness, vigor, directness, the very rudeness, the racy roughness of his author, gave irresistible force to his matchless appeal. Nor did he hesitate to avail himself of all rhetorical adjuncts. He not only reasoned but he flattered; he awaited himself of prejudice, he dealt freely in invective. For this I do not censure him, for the Tribune of the people, whose words were intended to dismember an empire, might well resort to all the aids of art in accomplishing his stupendous task."

He also truly says, "The approaching disenthralment of America, felt in the bosoms of the yeomen of Massachusetts, had been predicted by the orators of Virginia. The rays of the sun of independence were already gilding the horizon with promise of a glorious future. The coming brightness of the perfect day of freedom was revealed to the common sense of the people, before it was announced in the Common Sense of PAINE. If the latter originated nothing, it disseminated the truth of politics and precipitated the inevitable moment of National maturity. With all its merit 'Common Sense' has proved ephemeral. It has died the death of a pamphlet. HARRINGTON, SYDNEY, and LOCKE still authoritatively define the functions of the State and the duty of the citizen, but who reads PAINE? True it is that the subsequent base prostitution of his powers has tended to diminish the influence of his earlier productions, but this alone will not account for their neglect. We all read BOLINGBROKE, HUME still touches us history. VOLTAIRE delights us with poetry, GIBBON'S gorgeous pictures fascinate us, and many illustrious infidels live in their works, for the instruction of mankind on subjects not involving theological error. A man was needed for the crisis of the Revolution. PAINE appeared did his work, and is fast descending to oblivion, without hope of rescue, unless by immortality of infamy."

Seldom, however, has any pamphleteer been so immediately or abundantly rewarded. Mr. STOKES tells us—

"His was not the fate of many benefactors of our race, whose only earthly reward is the homage of after ages. Immediately this obscure son of a mechanic, this discarded English excise officer, needy adventurer of tainted morals and disreputable history, earning a scanty livelihood as journeyman-editor of a provincial periodical, became the wonder, admiration and hope of millions. The first glow of gratitude encircled his name with radiance before which the glory of earlier and purer patriots became dim. He was at once a favorite of the leading soldiers and statesmen of that eventful period. Attached to the army, he was the frequent guest and habitual associate of Washington and his officers. Pennsylvania gave him five hundred pounds, an unexampled price for forty printed pages, and munificent compensation compared with that of Samuel Johnson, for 'Taxation no Tyranny,' and similar productions, on the other side of the question."

Nor was this all. In 1777, PAINE was appointed by Congress Secretary to the committee for foreign affairs, but "in less than two years, and pending proceedings against him for false publications and violations of his trust and oath, he resigned office to escape a disgraceful dismissal." Subsequently he was Clerk to the General Assembly of Pennsylvania. In 1785, Congress voted him an appropriation of $3,000. Finally, New York granted him a farm at New Rochelle, which he valued at $30,000.

He held no idle pen, it must be admitted, after the publication of Common Sense. During the six months which elapsed between the publication of Common Sense and the Declaration of Independence, he wrote several essays in the Philadelphia newspapers, over the signature of "The Forcester," in defence of the doctrines of his pamphlet. They are not equal to his other productions, and are known only to those who are curious in such matters. Further, as Mr. STOKES informs us:

"In December, 1776, after the defeat on Long Island and the loss of Fort Washington and Fort Lee, when the first burst of patriotism was followed by universal despondency, and the cause of the country seemed lost at the commencement of the struggle, Paine published the first number of 'The Crisis,' which aroused, as by magic, the drooping ardor of the people. Even now, transported by imagination to that time of gloom, amidst the darkness of the tempest in which the frail bark of State seemed about to be engulphed, with all the hopes of humanity, our blood warms as we hear the inspiring language: 'These are the times that try men's souls. The summer soldier and the sunshine patriot will, in this crisis, shrink from the service of his country; but he that stands it now deserves the love and thanks of man and woman. Tyranny, like hell, is not easily conquered; yet we have this consolation with us, that the harder the conflict the more glorious the triumph.' This soul-stirring appeal was read at the head of every regiment, and inspired a martial ardor which both animated and filled the ranks of the army. Published every where, it every where infused fresh vigor into the counsels and renewed resolution into the masses. The battle of Trenton was the first fruit of this reanimated enthusiasm, and the first assurance of confidence in the armed citizens of the Republic."

After the affair at Trenton, appeared the second number of "The Crisis." Eighteen numbers were published in all, but "none of them are equal to the first
