the primary agent must be more censurable.

A printer or a book-seller should, however, reflect, that to be not so bad as another is a very different thing from being innocent. When we see that the owner of a press will print any work that is offered to him, with no other concern about its tendency than whether it will subject him to the penalties of the law, we surely must perceive that he exercises but a very imperfect virtue. Is it obligatory upon us to promote ill principles in other mon? He does not fulfil the obligation. Is it obligatory upon us to promote rectitude by unimpeachable example? He does not exhibit that example. If it were right for our neighbor to furnish us with the means of moral injury, it would be wrong for us to accept or employ them.

The question naturally divides itself into three two heads may for that matter, into three.

Firstly, did Old Grimes—"that good old man" over, and then said to him, in an accent full of passion and irony: "I am ready to follow you, Monsieur; conduct me to the concert of the Tuilories."
