Mr. Brewster argued that if the District Attorney cull send up a bill of indiciment to the Grand Jury after the discharge on habeas corpus, the ba-beas corpus was a nullity. A discharge on habeas corpus had been almost universally held to be an aviaud discharged Mr. Prentrell because the lation failed to make out case of also pre-tence. The prosecutors, decorative painters, had walked into the National Hall, and seeing Mr. Previzell there, asked bin if that was his bill. He replied that it was; they then asked him if he wanted the hall painted, and they entered into a contract to paint it; that could not be considered to be false pretence. Mr. Laile, on the other sile, cited a case in point decided by Jurge Randall; also a case in Wiecon-rin. in which the Supreme Court had decided that a discharge on habers corpus did not prevent the sanding of a bill before the Grand Jury. A decision made by Judge Randall to the same effect was also eited. Since the discharge of Mr Prentrell, the Grand Jury hve found a true bill against him. The reason for the discharge on the write of habeas perpus, as we understand it, was that the work was part of habed.
