Iron Bridges. As the question of having an iron bridge

"As bridges, and the method of constructing them, are becoming objects of great importance throughout the United States, and as there are at throughout the proposals for a bridge over the Dela-ware, and also a bridge beginning to be created over the Schuylkill, at Philadelphia, I present the public with some account of the construction of iron bridges. The following memoir on that subjoot, written last winter at the Federal City, was intended to be presented to Congress. But as the session would necessarily be short, and as several of its members would be replaced by new election at the ensuing session, it was judged better to let it lie over. In the mean time, on account of the bridges now in contemplation or began, I give the memoir the opportunity of appearing before the public and the persons concerned in those works."

WALNUT-STREET THEATRE .- The tragedy, which indeed a tragdy, "Bortram," which proceeded from the glooniest brain that ever wrote, was the play chosen by Mrs. Waller last evening. It is strange that this should be a favorite play with all actors; it is nothing but horror upon horror, and does not in any way touch the sympathies of the audience. Mr. Waller made his appoarance for the first time this season. We have spoken, on former occasions, of this gentleman's performance. His fine presence, his deep, mellow voice, are two great advantages he possesses; and we should indicate, but as a defect, a tendency to exaggerate—if we may say so, an over-carnestness, for Mr. Waller, like his wife, is in earnest on the stage. Perhaps it is impossible not to be exaggerated in a character so false as that of "Bertram."

Mrs. Waller's Imograme was marked by some sture pendously fine effects. Her remorse was appalling: her fall at the death of her husband was perfectly a new stage effect. Her mad scene, too, was free from all stage insanity and tricks, with touches of wild tenderness that were deeply particularly in the two less toots, where her admirable form was displayed to the greatest advantages. Tonight, by most especial desire, "Mog Merrilles" will be ropeated. It is impossible for those who have some haunted ohurch-yard where one fears yet longs to gaze on beings of another world.

Letter from "Occusional." idence of The Press.] WASHINGTON, Nov. 16, 1850

I am happy to say that, after a long and confi dential interview with one of the immedia friends of Mr. Buchanan, we have finally con ded that he is the only man who can unite the Administration party North and South, in 1880, and that it will be the bounden duty of the Charleston vention to put him forward for re-election. do not say that this is my confrere, Jinks-although he is well known to be profoundly in pressed with the same idea—but if the Adminis tration party is to be saved, who else can save it?
Has not Mr. Buchanan done everything in his power to destroy the Democracy, and to elevate his Administration? And have not the extreme nthern leaders come forward and accepted the treacheries he has presented to the Northern Democracy as the true test of political orthodoxy? I told you long ago, when he wrote to Judge Mc-Candless, in reply to Col. Barr, of the Pittsburg Morning Post, stating that he was not a candidate for re-election, he did not mean what he said. My prediction has been verified. Mr. Buchanan is in the field, and really I know of no man who so who could more faithfully represent the doctrine to which the disunion party of the South is solemnly committed.

Any man nominated at Charleston, should the Administration forces prevail there, must accept the theory that the Democracy in 1836 did not intend to secure to the results of the most accept that the Democracy in 1836 did not intend to secure to the results of the most accept that the Democracy in 1836 did not intend to secure to the results of the most accept the results of the mos the bridges depending for support from the bottom of the river are frequently carried away, I turn-ed my attention, after the Revolutionary war was tend to secure to the people of the Territories the right to regulate and control their domestic institutions in their own way. The bridge architects that I conthat seemed to believe that there was a life beyond the grave, and that he who had been of the well-known doctrine that the yorsed with in England denied the principle, but upon him at his residence in London, rather anxoutled from among his head and his action of the well-known doctrine that the yorsed with in England denied the principle, but upon him at his residence in London, rather anxit was generally supported by mathematicians, and it was generally supported by mathematicians, and it was generally supported by mathematicians, and it was generally supported by mathematicians. pressed his decided abhorrence to any further partiipation in Presidential politics in our country. It was with the utmost difficulty, as Mr. Slidell, of his Glancy Joneses, his Jinkses, and underlings of that sort, at work making opinion for him—the gentlemen among the circle of his friends being cheated in the meantime. I recollect how indignant Mr. Buchanan's friends were at his reticence on the subject of the Presidency, and how those who were anxious to support General Pierce and Judge Douglas revolted under the idea that he should withhold a declaration of his determination in the oremises. The game played in November of 1855 seeing played now. Mr. Buchanan declines arc-nomination, while he is working for it. His office-holders in Philadelphia, and his immediate adherents here all favor it, and I think the event will show that my prediction is right. The chief mistake, however, in his calculation, consists in this, compton polloy, notwithstanding their rendiners to accept it. He offered to make Kensas a slave be erected. It was a success. He closes State, and they agreed to it; and whatever they may say of his politics, and however they may sanction his war upon Northern Democrats who fought his Lecompton blunders, they, like we of the North, have grouned under his indiscretions in regard to his appointments. I have no doubt that ney would resist any attempt to put him forward as the Democratic candidate, even upon their own latform, in 1860. Mr. Buchanan has always professed to be afraid of a dissolution of the Union. He has always beonged to that class of Northern men who could be frightened by the threats of the extreme men of the South. He and Secretaries Cobb and Thomp son, and of course, Judge Black, are just now at flicted with the idea that this Confederacy of ours cannot last, to borrow a quotation from Daniel Webster, "beyond the next 4th of July." They even assert that Congress will not remain in ses sion over the new year. The idea is to manufacture a disunion panic, which is to frighten all the old women, and to dislocate the business interests in the Northern Btates. Unfortunately, this is a was created in this city during the debate on the Compromise measures; how property-holders were MONTREAL, Nov. 16.—The four notes of $1,000 cach, stolen some time ago from the Commercial Bank of this city, were returned to day by a terrified; how amiable men and lovely wome up to affright the community. Democrats Decapitated.—The following gentlemen holding office under the Federal Administration were yesterday notified that their services were no longer required at the poet office and custom house in this city:

George Yost, a clerk in the post office, nephew of Edward Wartman, Presidential elector in 1852 and 1856, an old Democrat and long-time friend of Mr. Buchanan, was unquestionably removed for the supposed sympathy of Mr. Wartman with Mr. John G. Brenner, Mr. Buchanan's old friend.

Also, Hiram B. Yeager, a clerk in the post office, appointed under John Miller, and continued during Mr. Westeott's whole term, was an old friend of the President, fought gallantly in the Maxican war, and is now Brigade Inspector of his military division. And Thomas Brown, a letter-carrier in the Third ward.

Joseph Monheimer, mail agent, running between Philadelphia and Washington, and universally respected, was removed, because of his active efforts in favor of the platform and principles of the Democratic party. James Clarke, a brother of the well-known politician, Hugh Clarke, has been appointed in his place. DEMOCRATS DECAPITATED .- The following

AN ADVENTUROUS RASCAL.—Yesterday evening, about seven o'clock, a young fellow, with anything but a preposessing appearance, entered a the store of S. Mindil, on Second street, near Market, and proceeded to bargain for watches. He spent half an hour in endeavoing to affect a sale, when suddenly he started out at fall run with four gold watches and a gold chain. Mindil followed, and after running some distance he grappled with his customer, who, he alleges, attempted to draw a knife on him. In the scuffle the thief dropped the watches and chain. Mr. Mindil recovered them all but one, and screamed murder, which brought officer Walker, who made the arrest. The prisoner was taken to the Cherry-street station, where he gave the name of John Dunn. No knife was found on his person.
