The ruler pressed his hand upon the heart that throbbed wildly beneath his costly robe of purple and fine linen, and, sighing, replied, "There is no brightness in my soul, Serah; there is nought but darkness and gloom alway. "Hast thou hearkened to the great Teacher whose fame has extended all over our lovely land, the ambassador of God, whose voice has been heard on Olivet's mount, in the garden, by the stream so dear to my heart, and elsewhere?" Can this boasted one dispel the doubts and fears that have gathered in sad confusion about my aching bosom?" And the ruler hid his countenance amid the rich cushions of the sumptuous couch on which he had been seeking re-

And he rose to his feet and paced the apartment impatiently, while his companion poured forth the language of condolence though her full heart was overflowing with sadness for his anguish. Oh! woman-wo man! what is not thine to do and suffer! "Seek the one I have named, my lord; seek him to-night," she pleaded. THE RAINBOW .- The solar and lunar rainbows lead us to admire the covenant faithfulness of our Divine Philosopher, who regulates the elements of nature, and who bestows upon us reason to examine the causes of them. The rainbow is called "the bow of promise." During the war of the revolution, the Colonies of America suffered much from want of weapons of war, provisions and clothes, and were often defeated. They were much discouraged by the dark prospect, so that many began to regard success as improbable. But Lafayette arrived to assist them in the glorious struggle for freedom; and the arrival of the French soldiers was, to the Americans, the shining out of "the bow of promise." Once, a man lived with his wife and chiliren in a prosperous and happy condition, but intemperance caused him to waste all his property and annoy his family. One day a genleman came in and asked him if he would sign the temperance pledge. "Yes," he replied, "I promise to drink no more." His wife was attentively looking at him, and rejoiced when he had signed. His abjuration of intemperance was, to her, the rising of "bow of promise." While we live on the earth we are subject to distress, sickness and loss of property. Our feelings lead us into the paths of wickedness but if we exercise faith in our Redeemer, God shows us "the bow of promise," inspiring hope that, after death, we shall enjoy eternal and uninterrupted happiness. "O, beautiful rainbow-all woven of light! And, bending above thee, the angels draw ne And, bending above thee, the angels draw ne And sing... The rainbow! the rainbow!

The smile of God is here."

SOMEWHAT PUZZLED .- Not long ago, a Jerseyman, about forty years of age, came into the office of a physician in this city, bringing with him an infant which required some medical attention. He was accompanied by a blooming girl, apparently sixteen—with whom the physician (a bachelor) was well nigh falling in love at sight. Such being the case, he was "struck all of a heap," as the saying is when, the child beginning to cry, he saw the His companion placed her soft hand on his girl take it and give it the breast. Feeling his love descending, all at once, nearly to zero, he inquired-" Is that child yours?"

"No. sir, it is my brother," "Your brother's child, is it?" "No, sir, it is my own brother." "Your brother! the child your brother?" "Certainly-why not?" "It is rather curious though-you look so young that I-" "But I'm married for all that." "And your child your brother?" "No, sir, my child is not my brother-I left glance of her lord-cherished next to her God mine at home. This is my mother's child. -and murmured, "Thanks, thanks-and now, We have each an infant, and as my mother

Religious Manness.—The physician of a lister, lunatic asylum attached to a hospital in a neighboring State, says that a large proportion of the recent cases in that institution are owing to religious excitement. A majority of these are of the "weaker vossel," and therefore essily wrought to a state of phrenzy, which has ended in perfect madness. Attending religious meetings early and late, to the neglect of all other duties—listening to the doorrines of pyedestination—and persuading themselves into the belief that they are among the foreinto the belief that they are among the foredoomed to everlasting burnings-it is not to be wondered at that, under such circumstances, poor human nature should take refuge in insanity. But these religious lunatics are not all females; among them is a young man who did, take care to get them out again. Like

He spoke, and the ruler listened as to a strain of celestial ministrelsy. Fear fied away—doubts vanished—and to his heart there stole a thrilling sensation of perfect happiness. He half of the freeman, and directly made known doubts vanished—and to his heart there stole a thrilling sensation of perfect happiness. He knelt and worshipped in sincerity, and when the first faint streak of the early dawn because visible, he left the side of his Divine instructor and sought his own home, thenceforth to live for that eternal and fadeless clime allotted to those who are "born again."
