He proposes to be present at the opening of Congress, on Monday, but will make a brief sojourn in this city. He is entirely free from the troubles which for so long a time detarred him from active duty, SATURDAY, DECEMBER 3, 1859. Notices of New Books. From S. McHenry, 406 Walnut street, (sole agent to the publishers,) we have received the 11th clume of the new edition of Cooper's Novels, il ustrated by Darley, which is in course of publica ion by W. A. Townsend & Co., New York. W uperb execution of this most beautiful and truly rican series. Darley's drawings, reproduce n steel and wood; tinted paper, new type, and the admirers of Cooper, our greatest American povalist. The new volume contains "Lionel Lin-noln," a romance of the Revolution, first published through. in 1825, fruit of the author's mature genius. Re wrote no book with more care, and his descriptions Richard Randolph's will, which dedicated all his property, amounting to $75,000, to pur-chasing the freedom of the living Randolph slaves of the outbreak of the Revolution are spirited to degree. The two vignettes, after Darley, which embellish this volume, are noble specimens of that the ground that the testator was crazy. Captain Randolph B. Marcy, U. S. Army, has written a Handbook for Overland Expeditions, en-itied "The Prairie Traveller," which Messrs. Harper, New York, have published, with maps, strations, and itineraries of the principal routes between the Mississippi and the Pacific. A great deal of valuable information, acquired by the auroted a conspicuous though quite an unex-pected part.

The Governor, with characteristic wide-awake-ness, desiring to discover if the gift of vigitance was as fully developed in the guardians of the place as he should like it, bethought himself to try the old strategio idea of sauntering by the sentinels in-cogrito. hor during a quarter of a century's experience in rontier life, is here condensed into a small space, and the book, it cannot be doubted, will be found accedingly useful to prairie travellers. The Harpers have published an amusing volume f North Carolina sketches, with capital illustraons by John McLenan. It is called "Fisher's River Scenes and Characters," and professes to be written by Slitt, "who was raised thar," They are very humorous, and have the merit of being short as well as racy. They represent people and things, in Fisher's River vicinity, as they were to e found in 1820-29. We detect a bit of plagiariem n Uncle Davy Lane's "Ride in the Peach Tree," pp. 69-74. A peach-stone shot into an old buck's nead, takes root there, and, in fulness of time, the buck runs about, bearing a peach tree in fruitage right between his shoulders. The same exceedingly tough yarn is to be found in the veritable adventures of Baron Munchausen, where it was Miss Harriet B. McKeerer, author of "Sun-shine," "The Flounced Robe," and other books, has just published another volume, entitled 'Edith's Ministry," in which she traces the his ory of an Old Maid-a class in society generally sneared at, but who generally contrive to do a great deal of good, by their singleness of purpose and good feelings. This is by far the best of Miss McKeever's productions, and has been written, like the previous volumes, under circumstances unfavorable to composition. She is a teacher, with perpetual daily labors, and her writing is necessarily performed with her mind disturbed nd wearied by her hard but useful toil for daily The Hon. William Elliott, of South Carolina whose contributions to sporting literature, over the signatures of "Piscator" and "Venator," are official result of the late election in New York : well known, has collected his sketches, with addi-tions, into volume, neatly illustrated by Derby & Jackson, New York. It is called "Carolina ports by Land and Water," and includes inci ents of devil-fishing, wild-cat, deer, and boarunting, &c. A lively, well-written, readable ook it is, and we endorse it as such. The Rev. John Cumming, D. D, a Scottish elergyman in London, who makes a great many books out of the smallest quantity of materials, and who believes that this world is within a very short time of its final destruction by fire, lately published a lugubrious volume, setting forth his views, and has entitled it "The Great Tribulation; or, Things coming on the Earth." It is a volume which a same mind could scarcely have the visiters bid the genial author farewell, little thinking it would be for right set time. nany of its opinions and assertions. Dr. Cumhis strange book out as a "first series." Rudd & Carleton, of Now York, have republished it, in a neat form. We recommend it to persons who have lecture and patience to grope through a volume of cocentrif fall wordy platitudes.

Charles Desilver, of Chestinut street, has just published a good Map of Kauses, and a new Map of the Republic of Mexico. Both have been compiled by W. H. Holmes.

Peterson & Brothers have sent us, published by Diok & Fitigerald, a 12mo volume called "The Scoret Out;" or, a Thousand Tricks with Cards, and sleight-of-hand—an excellent book of the sort, and like to set all the young folks conjuring.

Sheldon & Company, New York, publish a volume of Sermons by the Rev. Dr. Riohard Fuller, of Baltimore. They are good, practical discourses much above the usual overage of such especial literature. The sermons entitled "The Walk to Emmus," "Jocob's Ladder," and the "New Commandment," are especially good.

George W. Stevens, E-q. of Dover, then of Concord, called a meeting of the Democratio Workingmen's Club, and was chosen president of the club. These meetings were kept up during the debate on the Lecompton swindle in Congress. They were, in fact, Douglas meetings, and were then denounced by prominent leaders in the city and State—men who now claim to be first and 'all right.' Mr. Stevens then told them that in less than two years the same decline that he then advocated, and has ever since advocated, would be the doctrine of the Democracy of New Hampshire. It has been in one section of the State, at least, and Mr. Stevens in spite of custom-house cliques and demagogues, has been chosen a delegate to the Charleston Control, and will give his vote for the man whom he has defended when his friends in New Hampshire were not so numerous as at present."

Washington, it is true, and many generals of a later day, had played the same cld ruse; and, the soundness of the guarda they tested being endorsed by their promptitude, all that these worthies had to do was to make themselves known or give the countersign and pass on But the Governor, in his contempt, doubtless, for adopting the old method entire—played out as it already was—did not go to the trouble of making himself au fair for an affair of the kind. He leafed suspliciously about the lines of the samp for a short time, and finally approached within a few steps of one of the sentinels.

"Stop!" said the sentinel, bringing his musket to the position of ready. "Who are you?" his added, as the suspicious character reluctantly halted.

Nary countersign had the Governor—he had forgotten all about getting it—it was a part of the old race left out.

Here was a differma, and the Governor felt it, momentarily, like a small clap of thurder coming down on his beaver. He at length replied:

"I am the Governor of the State of Virginia—Henry A. Wise."

Perhaps you are, replied the sentine!, who was very confident that he had caught a lying Abolitionist; "but you are my prisoner!"

And so saying, heordered the Governor to march with him to the guard-house, somewhat accelerating his compliance and damning up his objections by a significant movement of his bayonet.

The Governor went along, somewhat chagrined at first, but finally became good humored, and bore his imprisonment like a soldier. He immediately sent for one of his commanding efficers, to whom he was known, had a hearty laugh with him over his adventure, and was discharged from custody.
