M. de Schleinitz (according to this account) informs the ropresentatives of Prussia that the Emperor Alex-ander of Ruesia and the Prince Regent of Prussia, who had not seen each other for a considerable time, were desirous of meeting in order to confer personally upon numerous political subjects affect-ing equally the two courts of Berlin and St. Peters-burg. They met in the Prussian city of Breslau, where they passed two days. They had frequent interviews, and are firmly convinced of the identi-ity of their views in all that relates to the political state of Europe. The two Princes have had no difficulty to contend with, either upon the general character of pending and foreseen questions or upon the solutions which these questions may and ought to receive, and they are sgreed as to the identical path which the two Cabinets should follow in the future. The amounce-ment led to a great deal of excitement in certain circles, and long before the arrival of the train supposed to contain the body of the deceased, a large crowd of people were collected around the Baltimore depot. The crowd was a mothey one, and was composed of a great many colored people, together with men, women, and children of the saron denomination. The Mayor, Chief of Police, and a strong force of officers were present, and no persone were per-mitted to enter the depet unless they had business i here. The orowd was sager to see the remains, and all sorts of expedients were resorted to for the purposo of gaining access to the building; but all in vain-the officers were obdurate. She afterwards accompanied the re-mains of her husband to New York. It naturally occurred to the minds of the Mayor and his öfficers, that the departure of the body from the depot would lasd to a scene of indignity and indecency, extremely discreditable to oar citisans, and palaful to the facings of the friends of the deceased. An expedient was resorted to by the Mayor, which was very successful. Another great improvement is the final de termination of City Councils to demolish the unsightly sheds which have so long disgraced Market street, and the crection of the magnificent new market-houses that now adorn the sections in which they are located, and add amensely to public convenience. Through the ruins of the venerable sheds now standing on the eastern portion of Market street, supported only by naked pillars, a glimpso may be obtained of the fine business avenue which has so long been disfigured, and in which the merchants have for many years been obliged to submit to constant inconveniences and de lays in the transmission of the many millions dollars' worth of merchandise which they have forwarded to their customers in distant portions of the Union. By the close of the year, these ancient relics will probably be removed, and Market street will present to the Ferri (baritone) as Rigoletty. These last two are eyes of Philadelphians, and to all who may visit it, the beautiful and imposing appearance its natural capacities enable it to assume. While the city has been fortunate in the removal of these nuisances, she has been equally fortunate in the substitutes provided by the spontaneous enterprise of our citizens. The new market houses have been constructed in a style which corresponds with the require

ESCAPE OF A PRISONER.—About four o'clock yesterdaymoraing, a man named John C. Cleaver, who had been curfined in the Norristown jail, un-der a sentence of fifteen years imprisonment for burglary, effected his escape. He was in an upper cell, near the roof of the jail, which was arched with brick. With a Barlow knife, and by diat of a great deal of hard labor, he succeeded at length in naking a hole in the roof large enough to admit his body. He then gained the roof, and with the aid of a rope-laddor manufactured out of weaver trings, and fastened to the cornice of the building, ho reached the ground and made his escape unde-tected. Cleavor is about 35 years of age, 5 fect 7 inches high, fair complexion, and frequently feigned the manners of a orazy person. He is said to have relatives in Pittsburg. On Friday night a high and cold wind commenced blowing from the Northwest, scattering the dust and driving the sign-boards in inexplicable confusion. Saturday opened up to us a sky covered with clouds, accompanied by the keenest of breease that ever came from the North-east. The wind luiled during the early part of the day, and finally direslved into a slow, uncertain, and drizzling rain, mixed with hail. During the night the rain and hall became so hard and slip-pery by the frost that walking was a dangerous experiment. Nothing more disagreeable than the present state of the weather could be imagined, and we would advise all of our readers not having policies in a life insurance company to remain at home DESTRUCTIVE FIRE IN THE SUPURES.--At a THE WEATHER, -- We are amply atoning, o
