"The New York Observer of Inst week announces that there will be a meeting of the conservatives of that city after the mayoraty election, which took place on Tuesday, having for its object an expression of consure in relation to the recent outrages on the soil and severeignty of Virginia, and repudiating all sympathy or connection therewith. When this meeting shall have taken place and its designs are accomplished; when our patriotic brethren of the North hold out to us the hand of fellowship, we trust the South will meet them in the true spirit of fraternity, and that both will mutually resolve to let the curtain of forgetfulness fall forever on the wretched drama which has, so excited the Union. Bad men of both sections, and rabid politicians, have used, and will continue to use, the raid of Brown for the worst of purposes. Every expression of will fanaticism of Trensied folly, which is uttered in the North will be eagerly circulated in the South; under the natural excitement of a civil war brought home to our very doors, will be reproduced and magnified in the North. We should indeed despair of the Republic, and be forced to confess that our experiment of self-government was a failure, were we to believe that the American people have forgotton their common interest in their glorious heritage, or ceased to venerate the monument of statesmallike sagacity which our fathers left us in the Constitution and reorimination; let. Virginia and the Bouth resolve, in a spirit of magnanimity, to believe, what all Northern conservatives assert, that there are merely sporadio Instances of sympathy with John Brown's madness amongst them, and that the general sentimen of the free States is devotedly loyal to the Union, to States' rights, and to the compromise of the Constitution. Let us frown down every effort to cause additional irritation; and knowing that the South willia fittell the means of protection, let us determine to meet the conservatism of New York TVORYTYPES, PILOTOGRAPHS, &c., &c., both ELEGANT, ARTISTIC. Dunnic's New Fancy-Goods Emporitim.—We have heretofore omitted to notice the elegant new establishment of Mr. Charles Dummig, No. 812 Chestnut street, where he has just opened one of the largest and most complete stocks of fancy goods for the holidays ever imported into this country. Mr. Dummig's name has long been familiar to the public as an extensive importer and dealer in this class of goods, but the grand display he now offers at his now warerooms, all of which is of his own selection in the various markets of Europe, made during the past summer, exceeds anythins of the kind heretofore exhibited in Philadelphia. All that could be desired in the way of fancy articles, suitable for Chrisimas presents, from the most trivial toy to saperb statuary and the fluest misical instruments, the most fastidious tasts cannot fail being suited in at Punumig's. White his goods are really elegant, embracing an infinite variety of articles, of a more expensive character than are unually kept, the advantages which he possesses, from his connection with European manufacturers, enable him to sell at remarkably moderate prices. Our lady readers will thank us for informing them that the present display of superior furs at the old and well-known establishment of Geo. P. Womrath, Eec., Nos. 415 and 417 Arch átreat, is now unsurpassed by 'ny ether house in this country. To those who are familiar with the facts, we need not say that he deals must other than the choicet furs, of his own selection and manufacture; for this reason, no house, more than this, deserves and commands the entire confidence of its reatrons. We take occasion to refer to this now for the benefit of present-purchasers. Indeed, we know of nothing more suitable, or that would be in better teste for a sentleman to present to a lady, then a set of handsome fors! and if we have anything of the prophetic in us, we are quite sure that Mr. Womrath will practically realize the force of this suggestion, and so pardon the liberty we have taken in referring to he palatial establishment.
