Boston: Walker, Wise, & Co. 1853. This is an exquisito little book for the family circle, the production of an able and clear-sighted woman, who has her heart in the right place. Under the form of an interesting Christmas story, it aims to open to the youthful mind clear views of the unerring wisdom and unfailing goodness of the Divine Providence. At the same time that it interests and amuses, it instils_into the heart a love for virtue and a good life; and the power of the author in commanding the attention of the young reader steadily to the end of the book, is	drinking, heretofore a frightful evil, is dying out."	menclature worthy of this great consolidated city,
