byterian Review, published in Columbia, South Caroling, contains an able article written by a trade, and warmly appealing to the citizens of the South to discountenance all attempts to revive it. He quotes statements from a number of travellers in Africa and missionaries, showing that it is inevitably attended with shocking barbarities and a fearful destruction of human life, and concludes as follows: of human life, and concludes as follows:

"Any amount of similar testimony might be brought together if it were necessary. It is not in the outtire of slaves alone; however, that these cruelties are practised. Equally as great harshness is inflicted on their journey to the sea-coast during their detention there, and on what is called the middle passage, which, in fact, is but another term for the greecest cruelties ever practised upon any portion of the human race. We might speak of the principal highways to the sea-coast as strewed with human, bones, of human limbs worn to the bone with iron (etters, of humared of these human being starved to death in the barracoons; because in vessel came to take them away at the appointed time; or of whole, cargoes suffocated to death in the hold of the ship by the attempt to avoid detection; but we refrain from these painful details."

"Desp in the inner chamber of the breast
Is her song-temple, fisher of the list rest.
List to the waried notes, how soft, yet strong,
As Memory's cloisetred sistes the sounds prolong,
Now 'tis Earth's lullaby, so sweet and mild.
That the strong man becomes her little child. Her notes of Faith, how full of hope and Heaven,
Fiereing within "the burning of the Seven."
Her songs of loy, the purest sounds of mirth
That sad laughing choruses of Earth.
Her very tear-drops patter touching airs;
Or poor such misserre on our fears,
"That, like a trump, to men of noble mould,
They never the rescuing arm ers half the tale be told.
