At "JAYNE's HALL," 625 Chestnut street, is The Cro GRANVILLE STOKES' Greeting to the patrons of the Philadelphis Temple of Fashion, For the years 1809 and 1800. Kind patrons, one and sil, to you I bring, In humble verse, the heat's best offering; Greeting warm, and salutations of a friend, Upon my muse I pray you now attend. The year hath sped, and with its joys and wees We sing the princely store, at which to buy your clothes; clothes; When round the world we turn our beaming oyes, What mighty works of art and science do arise. Mankind scenus bent on setting at defauce All that would chook the onward march of sciences; All that would chook the outward match of soin Who would have thought a fow years back Of laying down a Passenger-Railway track i Or that Philadsiphis should pass creation By that one act-consolidation. d$4-3t Of that full an spin a module pass created By that one act-consolidation. Yet, so it is 1 Her genius we revers, Her motio, " Hight" her son have nought to fear. Behold, and wander, and admire: Swifter than lightnuss from the sky, Its mute communications fly. Obedient to the will of these who Of GanAvitLE Stoars do buy their clothes! Whorever we may gaze we find The work of man's inventive mind. The painter's pencil now is nought, In spite of what it once has wrought; The sum themself (if you'll allow) Will paint your perfect hkoneses now; And not an artist can but-vie The pointer's pencie of the sky.
