The greater part of the other communications proceed in a more enlightened strain.

General surprise is evinced by the writers that any question of the purity of the picture should ever have been raised. A good deal of enthusiasm is expressed in regard to its color, and some criticisms offered in reference to immaterial details. The left-hand cherub, for example, is singled out by several as a point of assault. He is averred by one of the writers (ah artist, probably, as his manuscript is almost undecipherable) to possess but a single of the core rapirants can get, and hence, if the lower than with any one size as its standard— CITY AND COUNTY OF PHILADELPHIA.
