That we sincerely approve of the policy for un-	crimes is that of bank-note counterfeiting, while the talent required in the business is greatly over- rated. It is generally supposed that counterfeiters must be arflars, engravers, chemists and excellent pennen, while in fact the most dangerous sounter- feits in circulation are produced without any of those supposed necessary accomplishments. The explanation is simple enough to be comprehended by the dullest intellect, and is simply this: The system of bank-note engraving in vogue in all parts of this country is such that the counterfeiters advoitly employ the best engravers to uncon- sciously execute the best counterfeits; and num- bers of cases are upon record, where engravers of the highest respectability, who engraved the origi- nal plates, were employed by the counterfeiters to exceute the counterfeit. This fact explains the coellent workmanship on the best eogunterfeits, and the frequency with which banks accept frau- dulent instances of their own notes. The patch- work plan of constructing for himself only the mechanical duty of combining and printing ihom. Or, the peculiar construction of the notes enables the boilt with facility. It is generally supposed that counterfeiters must be artiars, engravers, chemists and excellent pennen, while in fact the most dangerous counter- feits in circulation are produced without any of these supposed necessary accomplishments. The explanation is simple enough to be comprehended by the dullest intellect, and is simply this: The system of bank-note engraving in vogue in all parts of this country is such that the counterfeiters advoity employ the best engravers to uncon- sciously execute the best counterfeits; and num- bers of cases are upon record, where engravers to the highest respectability, who engraved the origi- nal plates, were employed by the counterfeiters to exceute the counterfeit. This fact explains the coulent workmanship on the best counterfeits, and the frequency with which banks accept frau- dulent instatuous of their own notes. The patch- work plan of constructing the notes enables the counterfeiter to obtain the different portions from different engravers, leaving for himself only the mechanical duty of combining and printing them. Packer's message to na	crimes is that of bank-note counterfeiting, while the talent required in the bank-note is greatly over- rated. It is generally supposed that counterfeiters must be artisis, engravers, chemists and excellent pennen, while in fact the most dangerous sounter- feits in circulation are produced without any of these supposed necessary accomplishments. The explanation is simple enough to be comprehended by the dullest intellect, and is simply this: The system of bank-note engraving in vogue in all parts of this country is such that the counterfeiters advoity employ the best engravers to uncon- sciously execute the best counterfeits; and num- bers of cases are upon record, where engravers to uncon- sciously execute the post counterfeits; and plates, were employed by the counterfeiters advoity engloy the counterfeits; and the frequency with which banks accept fram- dulent imitations of their own notes. The patch- work plan of constructing the notes enables the counterfeiter to obtain the different portions from different engravers, leaving for himself only the mechanical daty of combining and printing them. Or, the peculiar construction of the notes enables the counterfeiter to alter the name or denomination of the bill with facility. In addition to these in- ducements, thero are the loose laws with reference- to the issue and passage of bogus notes, so that in proportion to the trouble and risk of the bustness it earling? It is generally supposed that counterfeiters must be artians, engravers, chemists and excellent pennen, while in fact the most dangerous sounter- feits in circulation are produced without any of these supposed necessary accompliahments. The explanation is simple enough to be comprehended by the dullest intellect, and is simply this: Tho system of bank-noise engraving in vogue in all parts of this country is such that the counterfeiters advoity employ the best engravers to uncon- sciously execute the best counterfeits; and num- bers of cases are upon record, where engravers to the highest respectability, who engravers it ourson- sciously executes the best counterfeits; and num- bers of cases are upon record, where engravers to the highest respectability, who engravers it ourson- sciously executes the best counterfeits; and plates, were employed by the counterfeiters to excellent workmanship on the best counterfeits, and the frequency with which banks accept fran- dulent imitations of their own notes. The patch- work plan of constructing for himself only the mechanical duty of combining and printing them. Or, the peculiar construction of the notes enables the counterfeit to obtain the different portions from different engravers, leaving for himself only the mechanical duty of combining and printing them. It is generally supposed that counterfeiters must be artisis, engravers, chemists and excellent pennen, while in fact the most dangerous sounter- leits in circulation are produced without any of these supposed necessary accomplishments. The explanation is simple enough to be comprehended by the dullest intellect, and is simply this: The system of bank-note engraving in vogue in all parts of this country is such that the counterfeiters advoity employ the best engravers to uncon- sciously execute the best counterfeits; and num- bers of cases are upon record, where engravers it ourson- sciously execute the pest counterfeits; and plates, were employed by the counterfeiters advoity execute the outperfeits; and num- bers of cases are upon record, where engravers it cases are upon record, where engravers it constructing the notes are employed by the counterfeit. This fact explains the excellent workmanship on the best counterfeits; and the frequency with which banks accept fram- dulent imitations of their own notes. The patch- work plan of constructing the notes enables the counterfeiter to obtain the different portions from different engravers, leaving for himself only the mechanical daty of combining and printing them. Or, the peculiar construction of the notes enables the counterfeiter to alter the name or denomination of the bill with facility.
