The lesson which it teaches is that of self-sacrifice. In an age which, in spite o its great and manifold improvements, is an age of egotism, it shows us that there is something superior to our personal well-being. It protes that the external is inferior to the internal man that the accidents of worldly position are but or a time, while the essentials connected with he perfection of the human character are for ternity. In fact, D'Azeglio's aim is embodied in the description of his own Lamborto, and the high-minded men of his age and

H. D. Clement testified as to the foundation of II. D. Ulement testined as to the roundation of the mill, which he considered as substantial. The following is the testimony of Thomas Oli-ver: I have examined the foundations of the mill ver: I have examined the foundations of the mill sines the falling of the building; I saw nothing to doubt the thoroughness of the work; I saw several defective pillars; I broke a good many of them, and found holes in them; I saw none that could be detected by their outside appearance; I found nearly of them broken.

When the pillars were brought from Boston, I helped to carry them in; think we broke one of them; don't know whether it was defective; after that I cautioned the men to be careful with them; not, however, because I considered that they were poor pillars; at the ruins we found many of the pillars that we broke of unequal thickness.

The inquest was adjourned until Monday morning at 9 o clock.

He was a prominent member of the Journeymon Cordwainers' Union of this city. His funeral was attended by a RAILWAY PROJECT.—The citizens of North-ampton county have had surveyed a route for a rail-road to connect Nazareth with Easton. This will place that point in direct connection with Pailadel-phia by the Freemansburg and Easton branch and the North Pennsylvania railroad.

MILITABY EXCUBSION.—The National Guards, Captain Lyle, have accepted an invitation to visit New York on the 21st of February, to attend the annual ball of the Independent Guards, Captain Boyle, of that city. The Quards will probably number eighty men upon the occasion. FOUND DEAD.—At an early hour on Saturday morning the dead body of a newly-born child was found in an alley near Ninh and Wood streets. Coroner Fenner held an inquest, and rendered a verdict in accordance with the facts. DABING ROBBERY.—On Friday evening some rogue carried away the show-case from the front of the hat and cap store, corner Fifth and Vino streets. The case contained a number of caps and
