Th American Embassy in China. We have received by mail from Hong Kong a narrative of the American embassy to Pekin, in July 1859; written by S. WELLS WILLIAMS, LL. D., one of the secretaries of the legation, and read before the China branch of the Royal Asiatic Society at Shanghae, October 25, 1859. The principal parts it rolates are familiar to our readers from the ac counts published when the intelligence of Mr.

WARD's final ratification of the treaty first reached this country, but there are further details afforded which possess some interest. It day, that FEANCIS WHITTEN, the father, had is evident from thestone of this narrative that Mr. WILLIAMS is persuaded that the that Mr. WILLIAMS is persuaded that the two imperial missionaries. Kwentians and ship when she was some months under three HWASHNA, were apxious to carry out in good faith the stipulations of the treaties of 1858 with the American, French, and English ministers, and that the Fordifications of the Teku forts were no following the example of CEBVANTES great strengthened, and the river rendered impassable, for the purpose of preventing foreign ministers from reaching the Chinese capital but that the Chinese acted under the impression that they possessed the right to dictate and define the route by which foreign minis ters should reach their capital, and however, antiquated or illiberal this policy may bo, in the eyes of France or England, it is by no means certain that their opinion was not well founded. The route by which the American embassy proceeded to Pekin was one commonly travelled by the citizens of China, and if a'l the accommodations for their journey were not fully equal to those which modern inventions have furnished in more enlightened countries, they were at least equal to the ordinary Ohinese methods of conveyance. The exact description given by Mr. WILLIAMS

The exact description given by Mr. Wittrams "The company landed the next morning, and were recaived by the escort, which had provided oarriages to convey them scores the coun-try. These vehicles are drawn by one horse, or driven tandem; they are covered with cauvas and olid cloth, and both the horse and driver are protected by an awaing. The body is destitute of springs, but the principal inconvenience to a foreigner is the want of scalar, and ariver are usually expected to fit is with cushions, and ar-range the inside as he pleases. An application had been made for bearers to carry two sedana, and they could doubless have been obtained by waiting for them to arrive; but a few hours' er-perionce of the coad vindicated the reasonable ob-jections of the Chinese to that mode of transporta-tion over this muddy plain, for the coolies would soon have been knocked up.". becoming "un fait accompli." The Buffalo Commercial said in a late issue that "the Claveland, Cincupanti, Baltimore, and Philadelphia pa-pets are advocating the provide bill for the New York railcoads." The Cincipanti papers have, for themtaincast. Like of the internet of sport from the formation of the set of the readers up with the times, we have from time to time mentioned the progress that the bill was making in the Legislature of New York, and we have quoted the evi-dence of some of the witnesses brought before the Legislative Committee by the opponents of the bill; but we have carefully abstance from the expression of any opinions upon the merits of the question, and, so far as our observation goes, this has been the case with all the other Philadelphia papers. That the New York newspapers opposed to this mea-sure about thus migranesen the newspapers of citize re should thus misrepresent the newspapers of cities pposed to have interests in railroads rivaling these supposed to have interests in railroads ravailing these of New York, is but natural; and we should not perhaps advert to such a charge coming from Buffalo. But the Ginoinnati Gazette, commenting on the statement, and denying it as far as Cincinnati is concerned, assumes it to be true of the Philadelphia and Baltimore papers, and asys that "i is clearly the intent of these two exites to have the New York roads tolled, and required to charge the same on local as on was freight, as well as to pub-lish their freight tariffs once a month."

all necessary that her rivals should be hampered by op-pressive or restrictive lexislation. The charge of the Bu falo and Cincinnati papers is equally unfounded and bu mius and chonnact papers is equally throunded and unjust. We have looked upon the coatroversy between the New York relreads and their adversaries, as a local matter, with which we had no right to interfere, and yet as a movement which would, in all probability, he immediately followed up by a similar effort to com-pel pro rating of freight in the Legislature of our own State.
