The Record of Upland Court. Lately, when noticing Vol. III of the Phbstion Fund of the Historical Society of ortion of it, which greatly interested us The Record of Upland Court, from 14th Nomber, 1676, to 14th June, 1681." This has will in excellent antiquarian, Mr. Edward Ar lors as they existed during the six years preceding the grant to Penu; for the Court which sat at Upland (now Old Chester) posal -its powers were multifarious. Mr. Armstrong traces the history of the Dutch and Swedish Courts, sparing no pains to o procura information, whether from the re- tack Me de at New Castle, Harrisburg, Albany or wen not does wedes were almost as puzzling as those as immortalized in his Knickerbocker. He ng facts, which are in a measure new :

ance to some of his modern successors:

"The Governor of the Swedish colony, Prints, found that his military education disqualified him as a judge in civil cases. Irrespective of the difficulties he encountered from the want of precedents as applicable to the colony, and the complication of questions presented for decision. he felt, as protector of the interests or the West India Company, the embarrassment of acting in the capacity both of judge and plaintiff. In a report, dated February 20, 1647, to the West India Company, he stated his troubles upon these points:

"16. * * Again, I have several times solicited to obtain a learned and able man. 1st To administer justice and attend the law business, sometimes very intricate cases occurring, in which it is difficult, and never cught to be for one and the same person to appear in court as plaintiff as well as judge. 2d. To act as secretary, especially in the Latin language, for it many times has happened, as is proved by the annexed paper, that I have received Latin letters from all parts. These it would be well to answer in Latin, as I really have attempted to do in the best way possible for me; but I do wish, and submissively catrest for the future, to be released from such a work, through the assistance as above stated of a proper and learned man." (Swedish MSS., Archives His. Soc. Penna)."

It is not an uncommon impression with percipal agent, who is said to have hid himself in an obscure corner when the firing began, but had the misfortune after all to be badly wounded.

The Gen. Miramon was very, badly injured by the Saratoga's broadside, and only gotten aftest with difficulty. The Indianola also received several shots, but they did her no serious injury. So soon as the astion commenced, the two steamers hoisted the Spanish flag.

After their arrival in Vera Crus, several of the prisoners made a public statement, in which they detailed the bistory of the whole expedition. It does not differ from the above. They all testify that the Mexican flag was not raised untill after both stammers left the port of Havapa.

It is not an uncommon impression with persons, otherwise well informed, that when Penn came, in 1682, he found a "howling wilderness." So far from this being correct, the delphia then owned by the Swensons, or Swansons, had for many previous years been in their possession, and under cultivation. A perusal Dan. Rice on the "International"
Prize Fight-A Suggestion.

To THE EDITOR OF THE PRESS: The article recently published in a number of American papers from the Lendon Saturday Review in regard to the great prize fight, induces me to ask room for the expression of a few ideas upon the subject of prise-fighting, which, if not particularly illiant, will, I think, at least possess the mori intend to discuss the moral effect of such exhib ns, nor the manner in which they are conducted. Neither do I wish to advance any opinion as to the relative "bruising" qualifications of the bold "Beniola Boy" and his antagonist. But, in regard to the brutality of a ring fight, I believe that very erroneous ideas prevail. If the pugilists be-labored each other from vindictive, malicious feelings, it would certainly be a very shocking an disgraceful speciacle; and persons afflicted with weak nerves would doubtless be able to find several species of amusement that would afford then

Although, sheorating to this statement, Prints lost his command because of a disgreeful surrender, yet it is difficult to reconcile the sondemnation, as assected by Von Sternman, with his reported the sundemnation, as assected by Von Sternman, with his reported the sundemnation of conditiones in his scal and delity while dowern or of New Sweden, and his later promotion to the more important trust in Smalandia, without belleying that after-proofs, if they did not entirely scouse, greatly extenused his conduct. If Prints did his duty at the Delaware, the ministers did not of their as tickcholm. No Governor wasso weak, ly upheld, and no colony, with such claims to sympathy and protection, was more badly treated. The dispatches sent by Prints were filled with earnest and oft-repeated pracepts for relief; and no resider, after the lapse of two centuries, can ponder the last sentence of the following extract without being in some degree moved: Il have frequently, according to my daty, in the most humble way, reported to your Excellency whatever here occurred, asking for more people and means of defence; but, during the whole space of three years and six months, I have recoived more and not the first matter of assistance from the want that the summary of the first matter of assistance from the want that the summary of the summary of the first matter of assistance from the want that the summary of the first matter of assistance from the want that the summary of the first matter of assistance from the want of the summary of the first matter of assistance from the want of the summary of the first matter of assistance from the want of the summary of the first matter of assistance from the want of the summary of the summary of the first matter of assistance from the want of the summary of the first matter of assistance from t

So far from this being correct, the shores of the Delaware Bay and river were pretty well settled, from Cape Henlopen to the falls opposite Trenton, the land being in a great measure taken up, and the site of Philadelphia then owned by the Swensons, or Swandelphia then owned by the Swensons or Swandelphia then owned by the Swensons owned by the Swensons or Swandelphia then owned by the Swensons or Swandelphia then owned by the Swensons owned by the Swen They had, during the whole day and evening, been riding about on the sand hills, coolly surreying the city.

About midnight they made a descent upon the first and second lines, between the railroad and Huaca, whose they were received with a good canaonating, and after about twenty minutes retired.

They seem to have had only a few small pieces with them, nor was the number of men great. It appears to have been only a union of everal small scouting parties, who caught the spirit of the cannonading in the distance, and thought they would see what they could do before the town.

ACTUAL STATE OF TRINGS AT VERA CAUS.

At lest accounts Miramon was still encomped before the city, and served upon the fareign representatives the usual notices of his intention to bombard it. Whether, however, he has now the means, since the capture of the steamers; seems a matter of doubt.

All agree, however, that up to the latest advices he still threatened the city. No one, however, seems to believe he will take it Miramon has with him a large number of very fine cavalry, which is constantly parading on the sand hills.

fight—a visit to the "Great Show," for instance. I believe, however, that in a case like the coming match, where both parties have a great degree of respect for each other, the blows exchanged may be considered in the light of eraggerated "love-puts," although it may certainly be set down as an instance in which it would be much "better to give than receive?"—a principle of charity upon which all such affairs are conducted. If a person has an aching tooth, a mustard plaster is frequently resorted to for relief, the sharp smart produced by the plaster affording a pleasurable contrast to the dull pain of the affected molar or incisor. So, when a stalwart, robust fellow is so full of strength and activity that he is fairly "aching for a fight," I believe that the blows he receives serve the same purpose that the mustard plaster does in the case
