SUMMER RESORTS.

MOUNTAIN HOUSE,

CRESSON, CAMBRIA COUNTY, PA.

This favorite place of resort will be opened for visitors on and after the middle of June, under the management of W. M. CAMPBELL, of the St. Lawrence Hotel, Philadelphia. Since last season a number of improvements have been made, consisting in part of a new dining-room, containing some fifty additional rooms; a new bar-room billiard room, barber shop, tenpin alley, and bath-rooms. About sixty acres of ground have also been enclosed, tastefully laid out in walks, and planted in shrubbery.

Cresson is situated on the top of the Alleghany Mountains, 2,000 feet above tide water, directly on the line of the Pennsylvania Railroad. For purity of air and water, and grandeur of scenery, it presents attractions that cannot be excelled.

ST NICHOLAS HOTEL,

BROADWAY, NEW YORK.

When completed, six years ago, the ST. NICHOLAS was universally pronounced the most magnificent, convenient, and thoroughly organized establishment of the kind on this continent. What it was then it remains to-day—without a rival in its sumptuous appointments, and in the general elements of comfort and enjoyment. The Hotel has accommodations for one thousand guests; including one hundred complete suites of apartments for families. Six hundred persons can be comfortably seated at the tables of its three public dining rooms, and nothing that modern art has devised for the convenience and social gratification of the travelling public has been omitted in the plan, or is neglected in the practical details. The early reputation of the house at home and abroad, derived from its unrivalled cuisine, its superb wines, and its home-like comforts and luxuries, has been enhanced every year by the unwearied exertions of the proprietors.

MONDAY, MAY 21, 1860.

Clerical Emoluments in England.

Among the last news from England is the death of the Archbishop of Canterbury. The Right Reverend Father in God, (as his title runs,) JOHN BIRD SUMNER, D. D., Primate of All England and Metropolitan—the Archbishop of York being simply "Primate of England" less the all—had reached the ripe age of eighty. He was a Cambridge man, and won several University Honors. At the age of forty, he was appointed to one of the "Golden Prebends" of Durham, a clerical sinecure worth $25,000 a year, which he held with other lucrative preferments. In 1828, he was made Bishop of Chester. This preferment was said, at the time, to have been conferred upon him at GEORGE the Fourth's request, on the strong solicitation of his favorite, the notorious Marchioness of CONYNGHAM, who had previously obtained, for his elder brother, the Bishopric of Llandoff in 1826, and that of Winchester, worth $52,500, in 1827. She was nearly related to both prelates. We are willing to think, however, that Dr. J. B. SUMNER owed his mitre to the fact that he had written many books of great value, including "Evidences of Christianity," Expositions of the Gospel and several of the Epistles, and numerous sermons.

In 1848, on the death of Dr. HOWLEY, the arch-see of Canterbury became vacant. Had the then Bishop of London (Dr. BLOMFIELD) been as mild as he was learned, and as moderate as he was arrogant, the Primacy would naturally have been his. Dr. SAMUEL WILBERFORCE, Bishop of Oxford,—commonly called "Slippery Sam," from his intriguing and wily nature,—was then in great favor at Queen VICTORIA'S Court, and he was considered first favorite for the great Canterbury Stakes. But he had, even then, exhibited an unequivocal tendency to Puseyism, and the Prime Ministers of the day successfully argued with the Queen that his appointment to the Primacy would never answer. He recommended Dr. SUMNER, whose opinions were on the Low Church side, and he was made Archbishop of Canterbury, at the age of sixty-eight. In politics he was as liberal as his position could allow, and his conduct and manners were very conciliatory. It will be difficult, at this moment, to appoint a suitable successor.

As a general, though not invariable rule, the Archbishopric of Canterbury is conferred upon one of the Bishops, it being desirable to have some previous experience in the clerical rule of the diocese. There are the Archbishop of York and twenty-seven Bishops to choose from. We should think Dr. TAIT, consecrated Bishop of London in 1856, likely to succeed Archbishop SUMNER; but for his comparative youth. Bishop TAIT, a Scotchman, educated in England, is now only 49 years old. That is the only objection to him. His administration of the diocese of London has been admirable, and he is, in all respects, an excellent man, and a conscientious, able, hard-working, and energetic divine.

Lord PALMERSTON, as Premier, has the bestowal of this great piece of Church preferment, one of the most lucrative offices in the gift of the Crown,—i. e. of the Prime Minister. The emoluments of the Archbishop of Canterbury were almost fabulously magnificent, until the year 1886, when a law was passed, reducing the income of Canterbury to $75,000 a year; York and London to $50,000 each; Winchester $35,000; Ely $27,500, and the other sees from $25,000 to $20,000 each. Land and dwelling houses, belonging to most of the English Dioceses, were let at almost nominal rates, the tenant paying heavy fines at the renewal of each lease, such fines formerly belonging to the Archbishops and Bishops respectively. Thus the late Bishop of London received for many years about $60,000 to $100,000 extra on account of fines exacted when he leased building ground, belonging to his diocese, in the West end of London. The new Archbishop of Canterbury, however, will have $75,000 per annum, besides having Lambeth Palace rent-free, and Addington Park, in Surrey, on the same easy terms.

Besides this, he has immense patronage. The clerical Province of Canterbury specially includes a district of its own, (greater part of Kent and a portion of Surrey), and twenty sees, among which are London, Winchester, and Oxford. The Province of York has only six suffragan Bishops. Moreover, the Archbishop of Canterbury appoints to every four vacant Canonry in his cathedral, to six preacherships there, to two archdeaconries, and to two hundred and seventy-seven benefices. The income of these benefices runs from $10,000 to $750 per annum—there being very few at the smaller rates. He also can appoint to a great many lay offices connected with the administration of his archdiocese.

The above remarks were written a few days ago, and crowded out by press of important political and local news. They were suggested by a line in the telegram of news received by the Europa, that the Archbishop of Canterbury had died. We have since received our files of English journals, to the 5th inst., inclusive, and find no mention, whatever, of this death. But, in the London Times of the above date, we have the following announcement:

"DEATH OF THE ARCHBISHOP OF YORK.—We regret to announce the death of this great dignitary of the Church. The Archbishop of York died last evening at half past 8 o'clock, at his residence in Belgrave Square. We are informed that only a fortnight yesterday his Grace complained of dizziness, after entertaining a select circle of friends at dinner; and although no importance was attached at the time to his indisposition he gradually became worse and died, as we have stated, yesterday. The Right Hon. and Most Rev. Thomas Musgrave, D. D., was born in the Deanery, Bridge, where he was born in 1788. After an elementary education he entered as student at Trinity College, Cambridge, in 1806, and was 14th Wrangler in 1810. When at Cambridge he obtained the second members' prize for Middle Bachelor of Arts, proceeded M. A., in 1813, became Lord Almoner's Professor of Arabic in 1821, and was Senior Proctor in 1801. In 1837 Dr. Musgrave was appointed by the late Viscount Melbourne Bishop of Hereford, and on the death of Archbishop Harcourt in 1847 was translated to the archiepiscopal see of York. The late Archbishop was Primate of England, a Governor of the Charter House and of King's College, Visitor of Queen's College, Oxford, a Commissioner for Building Churches, and elector of St. Augustine's College, Canterbury. He married, on the 12th of December, 1839, the Hon. Catherine, youngest daughter of the late Lord Waterpark, and sister of the present peer."

[The telegraphed foreign news supplied by the agents of the Associated Press is very incorrect, occasionally, and care should be taken to prevent such errors. Proper names, we have noticed, are often given incorrectly—and it is impossible to say whether this is the fault of the Liverpool and Southampton correspondents of the Associated Press or of the telegraph office at Halifax. We pay a very large subsidy, every week, for this foreign news, and are entitled to have it correctly and carefully given.]

The Archbishop of York, we may state, in continuation of our previous remarks, has a yearly income of $50,000, with a residence in London, and Bishopsthorpe Palace, near York, both rent free. His province consists of the six northern counties of England, with Cheshire and Nottinghamshire, and includes the Bishoprics of York, Chester, Durham, Carlisle, Ripon, Manchester, and the Isle of Man. His patronage is considerable, extending to all the dignities and offices in the Cathedral of York, (except the Deanery,) and 94 benefices, with 12 more, to which he has the right of alternate presentation.

The two English Archbishops, and all the Bishops, except the latest consecrated, have seats in Parliament, which constitute them "Lords Spiritual," and remove them from their dioceses to pass six months of every year in London. No clergyman of the Church of England is eligible to a seat in the House of Commons.

The precedence of the Archbishops is very high. The Archbishop of Canterbury ranks next below the Royal Family and above all the Ministers of State and the whole of the nobility. After him comes the Lord Chancellor, next to whom the Archbishop of YORK takes rank. Then follow the two Irish Archbishops, (Armagh and Dublin,) after whom come the Ministers of State, succeeded by the Peerage, according to their respective classes of title and country—Dukes of England, for example, whose titles were created before 1707, taking first rank among the nobility who do not hold high office; Dukes of Scotland after these; then Dukes of Great Britain created before 1801; Dukes of Ireland next; and then Dukes of the United Kingdom, created since 1801, of whom WELLINGTON was the first. The Bishops rank immediately before the Barons. The Archbishop of Canterbury has the sole right of crowning the Kings of England, and him of York acts in a similar capacity at the coronation of the Queen-Consort. Every Archbishop is a Superior Ecclesiastical Judge in his own province. He is spoken to as "Your Grace," and is formally addressed as "Most Reverend Father in God."

Whichever of the two Archbishops be dead, Lord PALMERSTON has a very charming piece of clerical patronage to dispose of. The appointment is his, by right of his office, and, as he dislikes the Puseyite or High Church party, he may be expected to place the mitre upon the head of an Evangelical or Low Church divine.

The Magazines.

From T. B. Peterson and Brothers we have Harper's Magazine for June, a capital number, which commences the twenty-first volume. It opens with the commencement of a new series, in which Porte Crayon's pen and pencil are visible, called, "A Summer in New England," Bedford being described and depicted, and adventures on land and sea graphically related. There is a second paper, by E. G. Squier, with engravings, on Ancient Monuments in the United States, and a remarkably interesting illustrated article upon Insects belonging to the Cotton Plant. There is also another chapter of Thackeray's new novel, which advances remarkably slowly. These are the principal papers, but there are some others in prose and verse. The editorial part, always good, is unusually good. The Monthly Record of Current Events, Literary Notices, Editor's Table, Easy Chair, Foreign Bureau, and Drawer are all capital. Pharmacological Examinations are ludicrous to a degree, and as true as the bulk of such opinions are, we dare say. Peterson sells Harper for fifteen cents.

We have the Atlantic Monthly from T. B. Pugh, who has removed from the Arcade, to the southwest corner of Sixth and Chestnut streets, a capital situation for business. We noticed the Atlantic Monthly a few days ago, from proof-sheets, and shall only repeat here, that this is a good number.

Peterson's Ladies' Magazine has for its June frontispiece, a very fine engraving, in line and stipple, from Winterhalter's portrait of "The Lady Constance,"—that is, of the Countess of Grosvenor, the beautiful daughter of the Duchess of Sutherland, well known as the Black Swan's friend and Queen Victoria's head waiting-maid. It will be hard to find a better Magazine engraving than this. A variety of other illustrations, including numerous fashions and patterns, are also given. The letter-press is of average merit, and the articles on books, though brief, are reliable because honest and sensible. This number terminates Vol. 37 of this Magazine—so now is a good time for new subscribers to commence.

From W. B. Zieber, Third street, agent for the republications of the British Quarterlies and Blackwood, we have the Westminster and Edinburgh Reviews, now in its fifty-eighth year, and fresher and better than it has been since Jeffrey left it, in 1829. Macvey Napier, a heavy Professor, then held the reins until 1840, and made it rather a champion of the Whig party than an independent political and literary organ of opinion. Professor Empson was editor from 1849 to 1854, when Sir George Cornwall Lewis, now one of the Palmerston Cabinet, assumed the sceptre. Dull and decent, pedantic and didactic, this gentleman's incumbency well nigh ruined "the old Rise and Yellow." He retired, and Mr. Henry Reeve became editor, and so continues. He may be less scholarly than heavy Sir George, but he has restored the literary character of the Review. It continues, under him, as far as politics are involved, the mere apologist of the Whig party. The new number is full of life as well as of information. The paper upon the youth of Napoleon possesses high merit, and the defence of Mr. Collier from the heavy charge of having forged Shakesperian manuscripts, is powerful, manly, and, it seems to us, complete. There is a racy review, also, of Wellington's civil correspondence, showing that, half a century ago, there was as much, if not more, corruption in the English Government as there now is in the American. There are good articles on the new treaty between England and France, and on the absorption of Savoy by Napoleon, and several other papers of merit, among which we particularly would notice one on English local nomenclature.

Public Amusements.

At Arch-street Theatre, Mr. Edwin Booth will perform Richard III this evening; Shylock to-morrow, for his benefit; and Sir Edward Mortimer on Wednesday, which is advertised as his last appearance. It is passing strange that how dramatists do not arise to supply the want, so much felt by all "stars," of new and striking characters. The perpetual iteration of the same parts by the same actors, season after season, literally fatigues the public.

Boucicault's new play, 'The Colleen Bawn," (an adaptation of Gerald Griffin's admirable novel "The Collegians,") will be brought out at the Arch on Thursday evening. It is a strikingly effective drama.

At Walnut-street Theatre, Mrs. Waller, whose engagement closed on Saturday, has appeared in two new characters. The first was Lady Rustford, in the "Wife's Secret." We understand that Mrs. Waller purchased, from Miss Laura Keene, the right to play this drama. Miss Keene had paid a liberal sum to Mr. Charles Kean for the play itself. But we, who were present at its first performance in London, in January 1848, and also at its first representation at Walnut-street Theatre, on Tuesday night, positively assert that, on the latter occasion, but the skeleton of "The Wife's Secret" was given. On this head we are positive, and are corroborated by persons who saw the Keans act in this play, in this country, before they brought it out in London. It would appear that the party in England sold a mutilated copy to Laura Keene. It is said that Charles Kean and his wife intend revisiting America this year or next. Will they then reproduce "The Wife's Secret," without mutilation? If they do, the trick in the sale to Laura Keene is obvious. We have Tom Taylor selling "Our American Cousin," twice over—once to Silsbee, and once to Laura Keene—and this second specimen of sharp practice should make Americans cautious in their English dramatic purchases.

On Friday evening Mrs. Waller played Iago with wonderful skill and effect. Her make up was extremely good, and she looked the part to the life. Fair and feminine as she is, it was surprising to see how completely she personified the subtle tempter who whispered jealousy into Othello's mind. Most Iagos are so transparent that the wonder is how they can deceive any one, with the smallest modicum of brains—but this Iago was the reverse, letting a frank and open manner cover the depth and passion of his thoughts. Only in soliloquy did the real subtlety appear. This Iago showed himself (Mrs. Waller will pardon our masculine reference) the master-spirit of the tragedy. The by-play was admirable, and some of it—such as going up, at the close, to look at dead Desdemona, was new and also telling.

Mr. Shewell has a benefit here this evening; Dr. Gunnington, musical director, on Wednesday, and Mr. Henry L. Bascomb on Thursday.

At McDonough's Gaieties, two dramas are now performed nightly, with a variety of singing, (comic and sentimental,) dancing, and other eccentricities. The new farce called, "The Reniers Boy," which was repeatedly played before Queen Victoria, in London, is underlined here and will speedily be produced.

Little Dollie Dutton's lovees which have been attended by over 40,000 persons in this city, will close on Saturday evening. Her friends made a mistake, we think, in putting the price at 15 cents for adults and 10 cents for children. Had they fobarged 25 cents, and half price for children, the difference would have been great to them, and the visitors to the little lady would not have been fewer.

Ernest Hohnstock's Farewell Concert comes off, at Musical Fund Hall, on Thursday evening. Besides Mr. Hohnstock, the performers will be Carl Wolfsohn, Mr. Warner, the Germania Orchestra, (under Sentz,) and Madame Johannsen, the vocalist.

Nixon's Circus Troupe, including the original Ella Zoyara, are engaged at Walnut-street Theatre, and will probably appear on the 11th June.

Mr. William Cowell, now of this city, has become lessee of the St. Louis Theatre, which he intends opening at the end of October, with a new company. The theatre will be redecorated and renovated in the interim.

Farewell Sermon of Rev. A. A. Willits.

DELIVERED AT THE CHURCH, CORNER OF SEVENTH AND SPRING GARDEN STREETS, LAST EVENING.

The farewell sermon of the Rev. A. A. Willits, prior to his departure for his newly-accepted charge at Brooklyn, New York, was delivered to his congregation worshiping in the First Reformed Dutch Church, Seventh and Spring Garden streets, last evening, in the presence of an immense audience. Long before the hour of commencing, every available foot of room in that large edifice was occupied, and hundreds were obliged to leave for want of room. Mr. Willits' sermon was vigorous and appropriate, having selected the following message of Paul to his beloved Philippians as the text for the occasion:

"For God is my record, how greatly I long after you all in the bowels of Jesus Christ. And this I pray, that your love may abound yet more and more in knowledge and in all judgment; that ye may approve things that are excellent; that ye may be sincere and without offence to the day of Jesus Christ."—Philippians i, 8-10.

The design of this selection evidently was, to draw a parallel between the testimony borne by Paul of the Church which he had founded at Philippi and the condition and merits of the people which Mr. Willits was about to leave. Many parts of his discourse were pathetic and affecting, and toward the close, in which he expressed more personally his final "Farewell," many eyes were suffused with tears, and audible signs of grief were heard, the speaker himself being deeply affected.

Among all the letters of Paul, said the speaker, in opening, there was none so full of tenderness and noble sentiment as his epistle to the Philippians. It was a perfect outpouring of joy, gratitude, and commendation from a full heart. Paul had indeed loved all the churches of his planting, but none so much as that at Philippi. The peculiar causes for the peculiarity of the apostle were here stated. In the first place Paul had planted this church in great sufferings, enduring on his first visit among them scourgings and grievous imprisonments. His miraculous escape from the dungeon, and the consequent conversion of the jailor, had in fact constituted the foundation of this noble church; and as a mother clasped her babe the closer to her heart when she remembered the agony through she bore him, so Paul loved this church all the more tenderly because of what he had suffered in founding it.

Then again, none of his churches had proved so worthy of his love. This spiritual child had grown up without blemish, while all the others had caused him more or less sorrow, and by their irregularities merited and received his rebuke; but here was a church that had caused him nothing but joy, and this because they were at peace among themselves, serving the Lord in harmony, and because they manifested a consistent z
