JAPANESE GARDENERS.—The gardeners in f Japan display the most astonishing art. The plum. W tree, which is a great favorite, is so trained and nontivated that the blossoms are as big as those of R dahlus.—Their great triumph, however, is to a pring forth plants and trees into the compass of the little gardens attached to the house in the order. With this view they have gradually suc-ceeded in dwaring the fig. plam, and oberry trees and the yine to a stature so diminuity as a scarcely to be credited by a European, and yst those dwarf trees are covered with blossoms and leaves—Alay-lon, whose work on Japan was published at Am-sterdam in 1830, states that the Dutch agent of commerce, in Neganol, was offered a small-box cue inch in thickness and three bigl, in which he grew affig tree, a bamboo, and plum tree in bloom. Some of the gardens resemble pletures, in which nature is skilfully modelled in miniature, but it is living, natural.

THE Boston Traveller says: "A few days since, a seaman, belonging in New York, arrived in Boston with his wile and two small children, supposing that he had a chance to go to see as an officer. He was disappointed in his expectation, and soon found himself without means, and his family suffering for food. Hendered desperate by his misfortune, he stole a cost, and sold it to ob-tain means to buy them bread. He was detected, and under the assumed name of Jones, was con-victed and sentenced to the House of Correction three months. Up to that time the condition of his family was not known, but now the attention of his family was not known, but now the other support.
