A CRETTENAM long resident in South America states that there is some dauger that the supplies of that virty useful drag. Peruvian hark, and the still more toofal suiphate of quinine obtained from it, may not be exhausted. The cionhona, the tree which yields the bark, grows at a great height on the slepes of the Andes in various idealities from Belivar to Saw Granadian. In the latter country it is found on the cantral branch of the Cordillera, and that the best varieties have hitherto been those of Pitayo, and Panaganga, two New Granadian alpine districts. But these are already exhausted, and both in this country and England another and poorer kind, known as Almaguer bark, which was at first totally unsalable, is now used to a very great extent. The price of the best importations in the London market has gone up, within a very few years, from its Sl per pound to 26d and 3s, while the Almaguer, for a long time rebused by the dealers, is now readily purchased at 1s dd. A single three yields from ten to forty arrobas, and it is calculated that it will take at least fifty years for the shoots of the old, destroyed trees to attain a middling size. The supplies from Bolivia, however, sometime to maintain the highest rank, both in regard to quantity and quality.

The following anecdote is related by Reaumur, from personal observation: "A queen bee and some of hor attendants were apparently drowned in a brook. He took them out of the water, and found that neither the queen bee nor attendants were quite dead. Resumur exposed them to a gentle heat; by which they were revived. The plebelan bees recovered first. The moment they saw signs of animation in their queen they approached her, and bestowed upon her all the care in their power, lioking and rubbing her; and when the queen had acquired sufficient power to move they hummed aloud, as if in triumph."

ON SHADLAY A HEART-BROKEN ELEPHANT.—A COTTOSpondent of the New York Clipper, writing from California, gives an account of an elephant who died of a broken heart. In crossing a stream, in consequence of high water, she was separated from her male companion, who was carried down stream.
She seemed to lay the matter to heart very much at the time, manifesting her grief in the wildest manner. Soon after she began to fail, and died.
On opening her, she was found perfectly sound except her heart. This was broken, caused, doubtless, by grief in losing her mate.

A Susquebanns, the new flag-ship of the Mediterranean squadron, was put formally in commission on Friday afternoon at the Brooklyn navy yard. A crow of over three hundred sailors and a frigate's guard of marines went on board from the North Carolina at one o'clock, and, all the officers having appeared in uniform, the flag was hoisted shortly after. The Susquebanns has been thoroughly overhauled and repaired since her last service. Her rate is that of a first-class steamer, the same as the dississippi, Powhatan, and Saranac; her tennage is 2,450, and her battery consists of sixteen guns. She will bear the broad flag of Commodore Bell. the commander-in-chief of the fleet, and will sail in a week or two.

The Navy Department has ordered the immediate outfle of the sailing corvette Saratogs, now at Philiadelphia; the will be ready for active service in a few weeks.

Previously to the departure, from Norfolk, of the steam corvette Brooklyn, the mater's mates of that vessel were discharged and replaced by midabipmen. A similar change will take place in all naval vessels having master's mates on board.
