tica. Last evening a rumor was current that he was dead. At the latter place, on their way home, the train was attacked with stones, clubs, &o., and the same outrage as above recorded was repeated. The clubs from Chostnut Hill went to Norristown in large omnibuses. They were preceded by a light carriage containing several prominent politi-cians. The night was intensely dark, and a short d'stance below Norristown the horses attached to the latter vehicle stumbled over a large pile of rails which had been laid in the centre of the turnpike, evidently with the intention of causing the de-straction of these in the omnibuses. As it turned out, however, none of the party were much in-jured. A body of twelve or fifteen men were heard to dovise the attack on the train, and observed to make their way down the railroad in the direction of the scene of outrage. They are known, and are said to be adherents of the Bell party of Nor-ristown.
