I? we may credit the statements floating through the Egglish papers, the pleuro pneumonia epidemic, which econted such a panie among our New Eng-land farmers, has excended into England. One journal states that Mr. A. Barbarie, who was sent to Bog'and from New Branswick, to purchase and transmit stock to that province, has returned without bringing any next stock. He found that the plauro-pasamonia was so prevalent throughout England, Szotland, and Ireland that it was dangerous to attempt to transport sattle to the port of embarkation. The existence of the disease is kept a secret as far as possible by the farmers, but Mr Barbario was furnished with ample certificates to the prevalence of the discase by large breeders and gentlomen, as well as by veterinary surgeons.

Among the stock brokers and stockdealers New York there was a great excitement on Thursday, and a further heavy decline in the prices of all speculative scourities at the Stock Exchange. It is predicted, however, that the exist ing prostration in financial affairs will not be of long duration.

The Political Excitement. In the midst of the excitement which prevails in regard to politics, there is little danger that the interests of the nation will suffer from the want of a sufficient amount of attention to public affairs by the American people, howover possible it may be that erroneous conclusions will be reached, and that the right men mby not be put in the right places. What with the immense mass of political intelligence with which the columns of the newspa per press is filled, the thousands of speeches dily delivered throughout, the country to large audiences, the monster mass meetings and numerous midnight parades, a warmth of fueling has been engendered which has aroused even the most torpid and indifferent, and made politics the master passion of the hour in all. ranks, and among all conditions of men. The merchant prince, who rejoices in the posses sion of millions, shares the infection with the hard-fisted laborer, who gains his daily bread by painful toil, and while the ardent and animated spirits of the land are boiling over with enthusiasm for their favorite candid ites, even cold and unimpassioned observers are compelled to devote a large share of their time to serious reflection upon the exciting political topics of the day. It is not only natural, but proper, that men who, by their free institutions, are endowed with the privilege of controlling their Go verament, should become deeply interested in the proper exercise of the right of suffrage when they are about to commit grave and important powers to the candidates arrayed before them. Fortunately, the America people, trained to political warfare from their boyhood, have always shown, in great national emergencies, as intense feeling for what they believed to be right as the most ardent patriot could reasonably desire or expect, and even when overpowering majoritica have rendered, through the potent bullot-box. decisions which powerful and vigorous minorities believed to be radically wrong, the latter have had the good grace to cheerially submit to the popular verdict, i which they believed the cause of order, as well as the provisions of our fundamental laws, required them to acquiesce. But amidst all this whirlpool of excitement-when the danger is rather that many men will unwisely noglect their ordinary pursuits than that they will pay too little attention to the affairs of the nation-when there is a comparative dulness in business operations of many kinds, and
