The practical resultaof these protracted efforts are gaid to be on a scale commensurate with his oratorical success. Over twelve thousand persons have been induced to take the pledge; many waning associations have been revived, and new societies formed to carry out, the humane object of his labors.

Although past three and forty, having been born in England, August 22, 1817, his appearance, barring a sprinkling of gray heirs, is still youthful almost to boyishness. His manner on the rostrum has not perceptibly altered since last we heard him, which was at the Academy of Music, on the evening of May 21, 1857, on the occasion of his farewell lecture in this city prior to his departure for Liverpool. He appears much improved in health. In sty/e he can be ranked with no other living lecturer that we have heard. A CHILD EATEN BY RATS.—On Funday afternoon a colored woman named Emma Ander-son, who lives in a part of a house in Eaken place, ranning from Currant alley, between. Spruce and Looust streets, went out and left her child, an infant only nine weeks old, in the care of Mrs. Davis looked the child up in the room coupled by its mother. Some time afterwards, hearing the baby crying pitcously, the woman repaired to the room and found that the child had been attacked by rats. The animals had eaten away the nose, part of one check, and destroyed one eye. The attending physician has no hopes of its recovery. THE RATEROAD BRIDGE OVER THE SCHUTT.
