Frankings)

Frankings (Fashions for October.

(Prom Le Fallet):
October is leading us onward towards the winter.
We have no longer the frashness and simplicity of the tissues for summer, her have we generally sudopted the right materials for winter. The autumn tollettes that are beginning to make their appearance combine somewhat the character of winter dress with the lighter and more cheerful aspect of the tollettes worn in warm weather.

Barege and muslins are put on one fide, except for evening dress, and are replaced by stouter materials. MEDICINAL. MEDICINAL. RAILROAD LINES. WHAT WE LEARNED BY THE LATE EGGPSE .-SALES BY AUCTION. SALES BY AUCTION. DYSPEPSIA REMEDY.

Bouillon's form one of the favorite trimmings for light dresses, and also on robes for ovening wear. We were especially pleased with two which we have recently seen.

One was in white taffetas, and the skirt slightly en pointe at top. At the bottom it was trimmed with a bouillon, or rather with several, in talle, placed one above the other, and separated by small ruches decoupees in white taffets, held at intervals by hows a signillattie, black and giroflee. The bows were pompone with ends. A black and giroflee ribbon, fastened by a very beautiful agazie, enamelled to cerrespond, formed the waist beatt. Plain body, with a berthe composed of two bouillone coupies by hows of black and giroflee. The alseves short, and bouillonnees, were trimmed in the same manner. The colfidare was composed of a wreath of dark grapes, and leaves intormixed with dalsies to correspond in color with the giro-like. This had a charming appearance in highly wanderbit. It will be difficult to find a substitute postime. It will be difficult to find a substitute postime. It will be difficult to find a substitute postime. A tatatane dress, the invention of one of our leading dressmakers, has caused so much excite ment that a description will not be uninteresting to our fair readers. It was trimmed with very narrew flounces, which reached a little above the knee, trimmed with a ruche of larger diseases, trimmed with a ruche of talle illusion, and the top flounces headed with a ruche of larger diseases, to see the constitute of the same material as the dress, with long ends, and trimmed with the same description of reches, formed a kind of scart. The sleeves and body were covered with, ruches of the same chargeter we have already described. A single-rore, with light foliage, placed at one side of the head, is the most appropriate colfure which could be found to suit so fairy-like a dress.

There is a leadency to wear dresses open at the front; they are even now coosionally seen. They will not longer be worn san 'closed. Embroidered grimps in muslin, and a moderate size collar, are worn with these dresses. Some are also made in Valendermas with insertion.
