PHILADELPHIA, November 5, 1860. The steck market was lively and active to-day, in sympathy with that of New York, which; it is alleged, is elated with a prospect of the success of the fusion electoral ticket to-morrow. In this city, where directly the contrary expectation prevails in moneyed circles, the improvement of the New York stocks was nevertheless accompanied by a rise here, founded upon the settled conviction that all the noise about disunion is more noise. The bears are fearful, too, that they may everdo the matter, and think it best to reverse their plans, and go to builling the market.
