THE AMALGAMATION OF LANGUAGES. There is a growing tendency in this age to appropriate the most expressive words of other languages, and after a walle to incorporate them into our own i thus the word Cephalic, which is from the Greek, signifying. To, the head, it is now becoming popularized in connection with Mr. Spalding a great headsone remedy but it will soon be used in a more general way, and the word Cephalic will become a common as Electrotype and many others whose distinction as foreign words has been worn away by common usage; until they seem "native and to the manor born." VISIT OF A HEW TOWNER TO BPRINGFIELD -ANEC-The Lynchburg Virginian, November 6, the day of the election, publishes the following letter 1860. NEW YORK LINES 1860.

"Is.Mr. Lincoln in?"

"Well, he may be at home, and he may be at the State House."

"Yes go ap stairs, and you see a dark passage—way leading to the northeast; at the end of that is the Estatition room, and there you will probably find Mr. Lincoln."

With not the remotest idea of the direction of northeast; but having a firm confidence in the dark passage, together with the perseverance of Japhet in search of. a father, we grope our way through the first dark passage, and find somebody at the end thereof, in the act of looking the doer.

"It that you, John?" said the voice; and, desisting from his occupation, the gentleman stood erect.

The voice and the erectness alike revealed the object of our search.

"It was looking for Mr. Lincoln, sir, and I believe—"

"You are right, sir, this is the man."

And, sure enough, it was the man. He obligingly unlocked the door, invited us to walk find and we found eurself alone with him, whome but twenty-four hours previously—the people had declared to be the Office Recontive of this mighty nation. On the Color, the Color, the Sold in lots to suit purchasers. which affect the lungs, the spleap, the liver, the heart No: it is the calm and dignified self-reliance of a man who has marked out his course—of a pilot who knows every reek; rand though his ship may have to be slowed, or stopped, or backed, as the intrinselse of the channel may require, has yet an underiating conviction that he will get early into port.

The comparative quietness with which matters have been conducted in Springfield since Mr. Lincoln's election, seems to be a conspiracy against army out here and storm the wigwam, or if Mr. Pryor would only come out to carry into execution his alleged intention to sot the part of Brutus, the ink might flow from the sensation pen. But servinity prevails, and if we would know anything of the policy of the new Administration, we have only to perase our well-thumbed treats of Mr. Lincoln's speeches. If we would know the next Cabinet, we must draw upon the imagination. If we would know what Mr. Lincoln thinks of secession, we come back to the speeches, and lo! Jenkins is disconsolate.

I think I said something about ink. That reminds or other parts of the human organism. The INPEC-TINE is the natural antagonist of all levers, and when November 13, by cats ogue, on a credit, commencing at 10 o'clock.

I think I said something about ink. That reminds me of a good story illustrating a point of Mr. Lincoln's character—a story which I believe has never been published. It runs thus: A few years since, a young man had cocasion to visit Springfield, to collect some baid debts. He had an inking of the propar legal course to pursue, but, in order to be more certain, sought the opinion of a first-rate lawyer, and was referred to "Honest Abe." The questions were put; and answered, and the young man was assured that the contract he proposed was the correct one, and was satisfied. But " what would Mr. Lincoin charge for his advice?"

"Oh, fething for so small a matter," was the reply. POSTAGE TO THE ARGENTINE CONFEDERATION, PARAGUAY, AND URUGUAY, VIA ENGLAND.—

Leave Ratimore for Salisbury and Delaware Railroad their presence in the system by this alarming symptom. Not unfrequently the diseases named originate in Constipation, but take on an independent existence unless the cause is eradicated in an early stage. "Oh, bithing for so small a matter," was the reply "But," insisted the young man, "I do not wish to avail inyest of your legal knowledge without paying for it. Here are five dollars." Uncle Abe still refused, and the young men plead in vain, and at length insisted that he should be allowed to make some present: "Well," said the next President, "when you go down stairs just stop at the stationer's and send me up a bottle of ink." Not many years after, that young man contributed seme more ink, and, although he had dealings with the Bouth, the last link was spread over a Lincoln and Hamilin electoral ticket.

Speaking of the South reminds me of politicians, and thinking of politicians reminds me of an appropriate paisange in one of Mr. Lincoln's speeches on the subject of the distribution of Federal offices. Speaking of custom; reminds me of a curious surtoms of Mr. Lincoln while playing chess—for he it known to the disciples of Caises, the devotees of Morphy; Playless, Andersen, Staunton, Linchenhein, and the army of chess-players, that Mr. Lincoln takes delight in the movements on the ordinary, as well as of the political chess-board, and plays a very fair game, but not a first-rate one. He has a habit of whistling and singing all the time—his musical ability being confined to one tune, and that tune, I szelly suspect, is "Dirie's Land." While playing chess Mr. Lincoln seems to be somitimally thinking of something else. Those who have played with him cay he plays as if it were but a mechanical pastime to occupy his hands while his mind is busy with some other subject, just as one often twirls a cane, or plays with W. The way any man plays, either at a game of skill or of chances. Success or defeat—the chances—the variations in the probability of triumph—the turning point in the struggle—the exhibition of temper under all efreunstances—the stubborn defence in hopeless resistance—the spirited attack with the weaker force, and all the incidents of mimic warfare contribute to develop the strong points of a man's disposition. Nor does Mr. Lincoln suffer by judgment under this rule. He plays what chessplayers call. a "safe game." Harely attacking, he is content to let his opponent attack while he concentrate all his energies for the defence—awaiting the opportunity of dashing in at a weak point; or the expenditure of his adversary's strength, self-reliant in adversity, magnanimous in success, and undanned by defeat, as is the model of a chee general. His abstractedness, however, must not be regarded as applicable to ordinary pursuits. He erises a point in conversation with remarkable quickness—often anticipating the meaning before the sentence is concluded.

As a lawver, Mr. Lincoln has been most successful in eriminal business. His power with a jury is proverbial, and he has been entrusted with the most 'fisiportant oriminal as well as civil business in the State. It is estimated that he resigned no less than $20,000 worth of law business in 1858, to engage by his campaign with Mr. Douglas. He is bester as an advocate before the Supreme Court than as a practitioner in the Circuit, and is considered one of the best men at the bar of the State to a supplement the nonest accuse and the most sucreasonal nevertheless—aiming, as he does, to show that on his own premises, his opponent take the attack, because he thinks he can successfully defend himself.
