

The Press.

TUESDAY, NOVEMBER 27, 1860.

To Advertisers.—The circulation of this paper exceeds that of any other daily paper in Philadelphia, with a single exception. Satisfactory proof of this fact will be cheerfully given to advertisers.

For Sale.—A Guide for Gentlemen Seeking Office; Mr. Lincoln's Administration; Great Speeches of the New Senator from Oregon; New Books; The Right Kind of a Man; Another Letter from Amos Kendall; The Question of Secession; Foreign Affairs—Personal and Political; General News; Sherrard Gleason on the Crisis; Maine Intelligence.

The News.—Montgomery and his band of marauders are in the neighborhood of Fort Scott. He has broken up the United States mail and is endeavoring to fly for his life. It is thought that the object of the daring captain was to secure the release of a number of his followers who were held by the national authorities.

There was some sensation yesterday in Washington, by the publication of a letter from a New York paper, purporting to come from a New York correspondent, to the effect that Roger B. Taney, Chief Justice of the United States Supreme Court, had been elected to the Presidency.

The people of Georgia are electing delegates to a State Convention, to determine upon the course to be pursued in the event of secession. Mr. Perkins has been unanimously nominated as delegate to the State Convention from Tallapoosa county.

A dispatch from Petersburg, Va., states that Hon. Thomas S. Braxton, a member of the Democratic Legislature, has been nominated by the Democratic Legislature, at Raleigh, for reelection to the position he now holds.

We learn from Nashville, that in Tennessee the banks have suspended specie payments. At least the State Bank and the Bank of the South have done so.

Advices from the interior of the territory of California, which have been existing between the government and the Kansas Indians. The Indians on the Orange reservation will be removed, and the territory of California will be re-occupied by the United States.

The letter of the Hon. Gerrit Smith, of Virginia, to his constituents at the New York Convention, is a most able and eloquent address. It is a most able and eloquent address.

The second is extracted from the New York Times, of yesterday, which is significant in the fact that it paper copies, and partially commands, the opinions of the Albany Evening Journal—the editor of which sustains cordial relations to Mr. Sumner.

A resolution was offered in the New York Legislature, demanding the repeal, by Northern States, of laws which prohibit the extradition of fugitive slaves.

The intelligence from Washington in regard to the prospects of the Convention is very favorable. The Government of Peru having failed to satisfy certain claims upon it.

There is a creditable connection between ABRAHAM LINCOLN and JAMES BUCHANAN, in one respect at least. After the election of the latter he wrote a letter of acceptance, which he deliberately and conscientiously repudiated by his subsequent acts.

The Washington Constitution, with its British odors, laughs at the anonymous insinuation sent to Mr. Lincoln, that he is a traitor to his country.

The Pittsburg Dispatch, one of the most enterprising and fearless Republican papers west, conducted by an editor who believes that slavery is wrong, morally and politically, says of Mr. Lincoln: "We expect him to recognize the fugitive-slave law while it remains unrecalled, as he cannot do otherwise as President under the Constitution and its laws."

It seems to be generally understood that Mr. Buchanan intended to resign the Jackson cabinet, and that he had done so at the same time that CORN and TREASURY would remain in his cabinet. Therefore, the latter surrender to the Union.

It is very true that the Republican party is sufficiently assailed by the enemies of the Union. Mr. Lincoln is in the management of the new exigencies that await him.

The Leaders of the Republican Party on the Crisis. The luminous light of the press has at last become so apparent that the voice of denunciation is heard, (save where denunciation is accepted as a grand desideratum), and those whose habits it has been to ridicule and to reproach are now prompt to reflect and to act.

It is upon the friends of the Union in the Southern States that the friends of the Union in the Northern and Northwestern States must chiefly rely. They are now the bulwark of the Constitution. The South and England are now the enemies of the Union.

We are not, therefore, surprised to see that intelligent Republican leaders, and newspapers, have at last begun to appreciate the grave exigencies which surround our country, and threaten its inalienable rights to the income.

South Carolina, by universal consent, seems to be the pivot upon which the whole Union hangs. She is discarded by the national men in the North, who whosoever a similar spirit in regard to all those of whatever origin, who imitate the intolerance of South Carolina.

With these comments, we introduce the following suggestions from leading Republican authorities. The first is an attack upon the present course of the Administration, and the second is an attack upon the Administration.

It is a most able and eloquent address. It is a most able and eloquent address. It is a most able and eloquent address. It is a most able and eloquent address.

There is a creditable connection between ABRAHAM LINCOLN and JAMES BUCHANAN, in one respect at least. After the election of the latter he wrote a letter of acceptance, which he deliberately and conscientiously repudiated by his subsequent acts.

The Washington Constitution, with its British odors, laughs at the anonymous insinuation sent to Mr. Lincoln, that he is a traitor to his country. The Pittsburg Dispatch, one of the most enterprising and fearless Republican papers west, conducted by an editor who believes that slavery is wrong, morally and politically, says of Mr. Lincoln: "We expect him to recognize the fugitive-slave law while it remains unrecalled, as he cannot do otherwise as President under the Constitution and its laws."

It seems to be generally understood that Mr. Buchanan intended to resign the Jackson cabinet, and that he had done so at the same time that CORN and TREASURY would remain in his cabinet. Therefore, the latter surrender to the Union.

It is very true that the Republican party is sufficiently assailed by the enemies of the Union. Mr. Lincoln is in the management of the new exigencies that await him.

WASHINGTON CORRESPONDENCE.

Letter from "Occasional."

There seems to be, in all quarters, a surer to the idea that, if a State shall determine to secede from the Federal Union, she cannot be compelled to return to the fold.

It is upon the friends of the Union in the Southern States that the friends of the Union in the Northern and Northwestern States must chiefly rely. They are now the bulwark of the Constitution.

We are not, therefore, surprised to see that intelligent Republican leaders, and newspapers, have at last begun to appreciate the grave exigencies which surround our country, and threaten its inalienable rights to the income.

South Carolina, by universal consent, seems to be the pivot upon which the whole Union hangs. She is discarded by the national men in the North, who whosoever a similar spirit in regard to all those of whatever origin, who imitate the intolerance of South Carolina.

With these comments, we introduce the following suggestions from leading Republican authorities. The first is an attack upon the present course of the Administration, and the second is an attack upon the Administration.

There is a creditable connection between ABRAHAM LINCOLN and JAMES BUCHANAN, in one respect at least. After the election of the latter he wrote a letter of acceptance, which he deliberately and conscientiously repudiated by his subsequent acts.

The Washington Constitution, with its British odors, laughs at the anonymous insinuation sent to Mr. Lincoln, that he is a traitor to his country. The Pittsburg Dispatch, one of the most enterprising and fearless Republican papers west, conducted by an editor who believes that slavery is wrong, morally and politically, says of Mr. Lincoln: "We expect him to recognize the fugitive-slave law while it remains unrecalled, as he cannot do otherwise as President under the Constitution and its laws."

It seems to be generally understood that Mr. Buchanan intended to resign the Jackson cabinet, and that he had done so at the same time that CORN and TREASURY would remain in his cabinet. Therefore, the latter surrender to the Union.

It is very true that the Republican party is sufficiently assailed by the enemies of the Union. Mr. Lincoln is in the management of the new exigencies that await him.

It is very true that the Republican party is sufficiently assailed by the enemies of the Union. Mr. Lincoln is in the management of the new exigencies that await him.

LATEST NEWS.

By Telegraph to the Press.

The Kansas Troubles. RECENTLY VISITED BY MONTGOMERY HIS LAST VISIT TO THE TERRITORY OF KANSAS.

There seems to be, in all quarters, a surer to the idea that, if a State shall determine to secede from the Federal Union, she cannot be compelled to return to the fold.

It is upon the friends of the Union in the Southern States that the friends of the Union in the Northern and Northwestern States must chiefly rely. They are now the bulwark of the Constitution.

We are not, therefore, surprised to see that intelligent Republican leaders, and newspapers, have at last begun to appreciate the grave exigencies which surround our country, and threaten its inalienable rights to the income.

South Carolina, by universal consent, seems to be the pivot upon which the whole Union hangs. She is discarded by the national men in the North, who whosoever a similar spirit in regard to all those of whatever origin, who imitate the intolerance of South Carolina.

With these comments, we introduce the following suggestions from leading Republican authorities. The first is an attack upon the present course of the Administration, and the second is an attack upon the Administration.

There is a creditable connection between ABRAHAM LINCOLN and JAMES BUCHANAN, in one respect at least. After the election of the latter he wrote a letter of acceptance, which he deliberately and conscientiously repudiated by his subsequent acts.

The Washington Constitution, with its British odors, laughs at the anonymous insinuation sent to Mr. Lincoln, that he is a traitor to his country. The Pittsburg Dispatch, one of the most enterprising and fearless Republican papers west, conducted by an editor who believes that slavery is wrong, morally and politically, says of Mr. Lincoln: "We expect him to recognize the fugitive-slave law while it remains unrecalled, as he cannot do otherwise as President under the Constitution and its laws."

It seems to be generally understood that Mr. Buchanan intended to resign the Jackson cabinet, and that he had done so at the same time that CORN and TREASURY would remain in his cabinet. Therefore, the latter surrender to the Union.

It is very true that the Republican party is sufficiently assailed by the enemies of the Union. Mr. Lincoln is in the management of the new exigencies that await him.

THE CITY.

AMUSEMENTS THIS EVENING.

WRECKERS AND CLARK'S ARCHERY. THEATRE. THEATRE. THEATRE.

There seems to be, in all quarters, a surer to the idea that, if a State shall determine to secede from the Federal Union, she cannot be compelled to return to the fold.

It is upon the friends of the Union in the Southern States that the friends of the Union in the Northern and Northwestern States must chiefly rely. They are now the bulwark of the Constitution.

We are not, therefore, surprised to see that intelligent Republican leaders, and newspapers, have at last begun to appreciate the grave exigencies which surround our country, and threaten its inalienable rights to the income.

South Carolina, by universal consent, seems to be the pivot upon which the whole Union hangs. She is discarded by the national men in the North, who whosoever a similar spirit in regard to all those of whatever origin, who imitate the intolerance of South Carolina.

With these comments, we introduce the following suggestions from leading Republican authorities. The first is an attack upon the present course of the Administration, and the second is an attack upon the Administration.

There is a creditable connection between ABRAHAM LINCOLN and JAMES BUCHANAN, in one respect at least. After the election of the latter he wrote a letter of acceptance, which he deliberately and conscientiously repudiated by his subsequent acts.

The Washington Constitution, with its British odors, laughs at the anonymous insinuation sent to Mr. Lincoln, that he is a traitor to his country. The Pittsburg Dispatch, one of the most enterprising and fearless Republican papers west, conducted by an editor who believes that slavery is wrong, morally and politically, says of Mr. Lincoln: "We expect him to recognize the fugitive-slave law while it remains unrecalled, as he cannot do otherwise as President under the Constitution and its laws."

It seems to be generally understood that Mr. Buchanan intended to resign the Jackson cabinet, and that he had done so at the same time that CORN and TREASURY would remain in his cabinet. Therefore, the latter surrender to the Union.

It is very true that the Republican party is sufficiently assailed by the enemies of the Union. Mr. Lincoln is in the management of the new exigencies that await him.

THE BOARD OF TRADE.—The regular meeting of this Board was held at the regular meeting of this Board was held at the regular meeting of this Board.

The regular meeting of this Board was held at the regular meeting of this Board was held at the regular meeting of this Board.

There seems to be, in all quarters, a surer to the idea that, if a State shall determine to secede from the Federal Union, she cannot be compelled to return to the fold.

It is upon the friends of the Union in the Southern States that the friends of the Union in the Northern and Northwestern States must chiefly rely. They are now the bulwark of the Constitution.

We are not, therefore, surprised to see that intelligent Republican leaders, and newspapers, have at last begun to appreciate the grave exigencies which surround our country, and threaten its inalienable rights to the income.

South Carolina, by universal consent, seems to be the pivot upon which the whole Union hangs. She is discarded by the national men in the North, who whosoever a similar spirit in regard to all those of whatever origin, who imitate the intolerance of South Carolina.

With these comments, we introduce the following suggestions from leading Republican authorities. The first is an attack upon the present course of the Administration, and the second is an attack upon the Administration.

There is a creditable connection between ABRAHAM LINCOLN and JAMES BUCHANAN, in one respect at least. After the election of the latter he wrote a letter of acceptance, which he deliberately and conscientiously repudiated by his subsequent acts.

The Washington Constitution, with its British odors, laughs at the anonymous insinuation sent to Mr. Lincoln, that he is a traitor to his country. The Pittsburg Dispatch, one of the most enterprising and fearless Republican papers west, conducted by an editor who believes that slavery is wrong, morally and politically, says of Mr. Lincoln: "We expect him to recognize the fugitive-slave law while it remains unrecalled, as he cannot do otherwise as President under the Constitution and its laws."

It seems to be generally understood that Mr. Buchanan intended to resign the Jackson cabinet, and that he had done so at the same time that CORN and TREASURY would remain in his cabinet. Therefore, the latter surrender to the Union.

It is very true that the Republican party is sufficiently assailed by the enemies of the Union. Mr. Lincoln is in the management of the new exigencies that await him.

It is very true that the Republican party is sufficiently assailed by the enemies of the Union. Mr. Lincoln is in the management of the new exigencies that await him.