Kossuth's Hungarian Notes. Some weeks ago, Louis Kossuth, now residing in London, employed Mr. Day, litho-(half a dollar) each, to the amount of 100,000,000 florins, The notes, in the Hungarian language, in which no Austrian paper money is ever issued, run as follows: "One Florin.—This monetary note will be received a every Hungarian State and public pay office as one florin in silver—three zwanzigers is guaranteed by the State in the name of the Asplendid assortment of Spring Courtney at White sale and retail, at the lowest cash prices, at TOWER HALL, 518 MARKET Street. Before directing these iotes to be lithographed, Kossuth took the best legal advice, as also did Mr. Day, and was assured that such lithographing and printing contravened no law of England.

A policeman, who heard of the affair, suc eded in obtaining a sheet of the printed notes, which was placed in the hands of Sir G. C. At once, the Austrian Ambassador in the name of his master, as Emperor of Austri and King of Hungary and Bohemia, applied to the Vice Chancellor's Court to restrain Mr. Day from issuing the notes. His grounds were that the Emperor had the sole right to issue paper-money in Hungary; the sole right to affix the arms of Hungary to any document; and that he believed Kossuth intended to use these notes, among other purposes, to promote revolution and disorder in Hungary. The injunction was issued, as a matter of course. In a few days, Kossuth applied to have it dissolved, filing an affidavit contradicting the allegations on behalf of the Emperor of Austria. RELIGIOUS. Revised Version of the Gospel by Matthew.* In an article published in The Press, in January, 1860, we gave several reasons in favor of a revised translation of the Holy Scriptures, and referred at some length to various movements then on toot, looking to an early consummation of such a work. Additional observation has strengthened our conviction, that a more perfect and moderngrapher to Queen Victoria, to lithograph a ized translation is much needed. That, in the notes, which bear formity evinced, the word hoti is here translated verse of the same chapter, the same word is rendered, more forcibly we think, because: "Neither ter," as applied to our Lord, we have "Teacher," from the Greek didaskalos, a rendering which we have also of the same word in the received version, in this among other passages: "And he gave some apostles, * * * and some pastors and teachers.' suth's singular statement, upon oath, and it In the parable of the wheat and the tares, Mattxiii., the word "darnel" is a substitute for "tares," answer in any way to the terms of the parable, whilst the bearded darnel, which the Greek word implies, answers perfectly. A chief defect in our common translation com sists in this, that in it the same word in the original, is variously and very differently rendered whilst on the other hand, words of widely different meaning are rendered in the same word in English. We have, therefore, a right to expect that in a corrected edition this should be, if possible, avoided. To speak more accurately of the defect referred to, a few illustrations will suffice: The Greek word diakonos occurs in the Christian Scrip tures (as distinguished from the Scriptures of Is rael) a number of times, and is variously rendered "descon," "servant," and "minister." Now however nearly related may be the radical thought of these three words, they are, according to popular usage, essentially different. Dr. Conant has The most careless person can notice, with half we may use the phrase, but he has made it still more an eye, as the saying is, that a great change has diverse by translating diakonos, Matt. xxii., 13, "attendants." Veekly Review of the Philadelphia Markets.

PHILADELPHIA, April 12, 1861 The warlike news from the South has interfered with business, and the operations of the past week have been to a moderate extent. Bark is firmer, and there is not much doing. Breadstuffs-There is less doing, and prices of all descriptions are less firm. Conl is unchanged. Coffee is in good request. Sugar is quiet. Molasses is dull and neglected. Cotton-The fine grades meet a good inquiry, but other kinds are dull. Fish are quiet, on landing. The Iron market is firm, and some holders have advanced their rates. Lard is steady. Lumber is attracting more attention. Naval Stores remain quiet. Provisions are firmer, but without change in prices. Rice is quiet. Salt—All the recent arrivals are unsold. Tallow, Teas, and To-rate pastoral qualities and decided ability, and to mere ambetton this proffer of advancement might have presented an overwhelming argument; the more so as the salary attached was three thousand dollars more than he is receiving in his present position. We have no doubt that it will be gratifying to all parties to have such a practical domonstration that there are those in the ministry whose ambition is thus shown to be above the acquisition of money or fame.

In our issue of Thursday we gave the story of one of the new operas to be given during the complete form of the season of Italian opera at the Academy —viz: Verdi's latest work, "Un Ballo in Maschers," which, it was stated by the management, would be the first novelty of the season. The arrangements have since been changed. The opening ing opera, on Monday evening next, will be "Il Repoystors.—The market is firmer, with sales of Provisions.—The market is firmer with sales of Provisions.—The market is firmer with sales of Provisions.—The market is firmer.

CANDLES.—There is more doing in Adamantine, and we notice contracts for over 2 000 boxes city-made on private terms; small sales at 16 al8c unanimously-admitted-to-be Halevy's great culminating work. Much curiosity and interest are manifested concerning its production here. The plot is highly dramatic, and affords room alike for lyrio, dramatic, and spectacular display, as will be seen by the following brief synopsis of the story.
The scene is laid in Constance, in 1414:

Leopold, a prince of the Empire, returning from the wars, is violently smitten with the beauty of Rachel, daughter of Lazarus, the Jew. To win her affections, he pretends to be an Israelite, and in
