Had not this surrender been precipitated the Pawnee's, Pocahontas' and Lane's m, with the soldiers from the Baltic, would have been at the base of Sumpter, or have perished in he attempt. On the 14th, at daylight, a steamer, with a flag of truce at her main and the so-called Confederate flag at her peak, and under the com-Confederate mag at her peak, and under the com-mand of H. I. Hartstene, once a petted commander in the United States navy—now in arms against it—came out to open negotiations; Captain Gillis of the Pocahomtas, heing senior efficer, superseded Captain Rowan in the direction of affairs. This officer went in to Sumpter in tow of Hartstene's steamer. At daylight, the American flag was observed still there, a temporary staff having been put up. At 1 P. M., a sa-lute was fired from Sumpter, by its own galant garrison; but, unfortunately, from the inflammable CLFARED, Bark Union, Heard, Pernambuco and a market, Lewis asterial from which the cartridges were made, an explosion took place which killed and wounded Bark Union, Heard, Fernambuco and a market, Liewis & Damon.
