The Home Guard and the Gray

Reserves. Philadelphia and Pennsylvania enjoy common an unfortunate taste for dissension and partisan hostilities at all times, and, unfortunately, this proclivity is now steadily sapping the military demonstration of this city. Instead of a ready and successful establishment of a real Home Guard, we see the unfortunate spectacle of two bodies of cititude of partial opposition to each another.

Tone of Southern Merchants.

It would be unjust in all cases to judge men by the company they keep. This is especially true of the loyal merchants in the seceded States. That many of our business men will be materially crippled, and even reduced to utter bankruptcy, through the bad faith of their Southern customers, is highly probable; but it must not be overlooked that among those who have long patronized this market from that section there are many honorable exceptions to this rule. They may be in a minority, but their course is thereby rendered the more creditable, and deserves recognition. From a number of letters that have been shown to us by merchants, received from their debtors in the South within the last few days, we are convinced that by high-minded men in the tion, with a military piece de circonstance of the rebel States the course recommended by present time, and a farce every night.
