TWO LETTERS FROM MR. RUSSELL.
The American Blockade Question in Parliament.

Impression of British Subjects in the British Army.

The following items of foreign news we had in type on Monday night, but, owing to the press of other matter, we had to omit them from our issue of yesterday:

MR. RUSSELL'S OPINION OF SOUTH CAROLINA. (From the London Times.)

SATURDAY, S. C., April 30.

Nothing I could say can be more true fact which has forced itself upon my mind than that the South were right in their action in separating from the Union, the burgesses of South Carolina had solemnly elected the wandering Charles King of England to be their master, and to rule over their kingdom. The philosophical historian may excuse his ingenuity in conjecturing what would have been the result if the South had not separated from the Union.

In my next letter I shall give a brief account of a visit to some of the plantations, so far as it can be given at all upon the spot. These gentlemen have no slaves, and the principles of the South are not to be denied.

Let there be no misconception on this point, however, for I am not a Southerner, and have never been to the South, nor do I know anything about it.

There is a general admission on the part of the South that they are not to be blamed.

The South, however, are not to be blamed.

They are not to be blamed.
