ARON GARRETSON, Proprietor. division, and recommended the Convention shortly to reassemble to take immediate action.

The discussion developed a protty strong element opposed to any division. A good many favored immediate action, on the ground that, when the State should be fully represented, assessed could not be obtained, and they wanted to make use of the advantage circumstances had thrown in their way. They were for division, first, last, and all the time. Another class, and the majority, favors a division, but thought it imposite, as it would interfere with the plans of the Givernment, which would not at this time countenance such a move The result was that no action at all was taken, and the Legislature left the surject just where they found it. The Convention reassembles on the 6th of August.
