Literature, Science, and Art. There is scarcely any thing done in Philadelphia in the United States, this week we have to report from Ticknor & Fields a volume containing the second series of "The Recollections of a Country Parson."

The new volume of Irving, National Edition, published by Putnam, and for sale by H. B. Ward, Jr., in this city, contains the concluding portion of "Mahomet and his Successors."

Mr. Putnam has also republished from the original, in pamphlet form, a letter written by the second President of the Continental Congress, to his son, Colonel John Collins, dated Charleston, S. C., August 14, 1776.

The number of the Edinburgh Review, which commences a volume, has been received from Mr. Zieher, South Third street.

Mr. Hotten, who publishes out-of-the-way books, has just published a new edition of the "Wit's Vade Mecum: Being a Collection of the most elegant and useful mottoes, and the most elegant Latin mottoes, the most pleasant short stories in the English language."

It has been discovered, by comparison of various paintings, that many portraits painted by Sir Christopher Wren and Sir Isaac Newton, are not the work of the artist.

Among the young Irish poets, Aubrey de Vere, brother of an Irish baronet, is considerably distinguished.

There is a posthumous work of Cromwell, taken from his private diary, which was published at Edinburgh in 1850.
