A Notorious Character.—The residents of Franklin county, Pa., for some time past have been greatly troubled by the depredations of a notorious gang of thieves and incendiaries. Dwelland barns have been broken open, rigs, stores, and barns have been broken open, robbed, and fired, and Chambersburg and Green-castle suffered severely. Carlisle was also visited and plundered by the outlaws. On last Wednesday night two large wavehouses at Greeneastle were robbed and fired. The flames died out in one of the buildings, but the other was entirely destro party of six or eight strangers, who claimed to returned volunteers, and who busied themselves about the scene of the conflagration, became objects of suspicion, and this fact seems to have reached their ears, for they suddenly took themselves off while the fire was still raging.

The next morning the people of the town turned out and pursued the gang, and they succeeded in securing three of the men. One, who appeared to be the leader, gave the name of George W. Race, and he said he belonged to Captain Spear's company of the Scott Legion. Upon his person were found a number of valuables stolen from different places that had been robbed and fired, and among them was the deed for the storm which had been

them was the deed for the store which had been robbed and burned the night before.

The villains were placed in prison, and the authorities at Greeneastle wrote to Captain Spear to sacertain whether Race had belonged to the Scott Legion, an ascertion which they were loth to believe. Captain Spear happened to be perfectly familiar with the character and history of Race, and her to not weather the source here. familiar with the character and history of Race, and he at once wrote back to secure the prisoner, or he would give them the slip.

Race is a Philadelphian, and he served an apprenticeship at machine making in this city. Some thirteen or fourteen years ago he was a member of a fire company up town, and ho was engaged in repeated acts of incendiarism and robbery. He was finely detected, and the burning of Thompson's saw mill and lumber yard, at Eleventh and Buttonweod streets, and other acts of arson, were fastened upon him. He was convicted and sentenced to twelve years' imprisonment in the Eastern Penito twelve years' imprisonment in the Eastern Peniwhile confined in the institution he was set to Wille confined in the institution, he was set to work to repair some locks and keys belonging to the prison, and while thus employed he managed to make a duplicate key for the main gate on Coates street. After making his escape, he went to the State of New York, where he obtained amployment as a machinist in one of the shops of the Hudson River Railroad Company. the shops of the Hudson River Railroad Company.

He carned good wages, but the spirit of mischief was too strong in him to be repressed, and he would go up to Albany in the evening, commit a robbery or an act of incendiarism, and return to his workshop in time to resume his honest employment in the morning. He was finally detected, and, upon discovering his identity with the fruitive with the discovering his identity with the fugitive prisoner from Cherry Hill, he was returned to this city, and placed in his old quarters.

He behaved himself well in the main after his reatoration to prison; but just before the close of his term of imprisonment he indulged in threats of vengeance against certain parties. About one year since he was released from prison, his term of service having expired, and, upon the day of his discharge, Fire Marshal Blackburn visited him in his charge, impressed noon him the partil he would in cell and impressed upon him the peril he would in-cur by resuming his old practices, now that his person and character were so well known, and that he was an object of suspicion.

Race made promises of reformation, and upon his release he went to Allegheny city, where he went to work at his trade. On the breaking out of the war he came to this city, and enrolled himself in War he came to this city, and enrolled nimself in Captain Spear's company in the Scott Legion, and he served with that regiment during the time it was in General Patterson's division in Virginia. During his absence he behaved himself well, and he won the good opinion of Captain Spear, who believed that he had theroughly reformed.

After the return home of the Legion, Race organized a gang of scoundrels like himself, and they went into Franklin and Cumberland counties where they committed the outrages which we have already narrated. Captain Spear (who is also a lieutenant of police) and Fire Marshal Blackburn have taken the matter in hand, and if the arch willain does not get his deserts in Franklin county. it will not be for the want of a knowledge of his

Dr. Tyng spoke with much severity concerning the character of some of the men who were appointed to chaplaincies in the army. He also said that in the hospital at Washington, some of the surgeons ate the hospital at Washington, some of the surgeons ate the delicacies sent to the sick and wounded soldiers. Dr. Brainerd denied that this occurred at present, though it might have taken place earlier in the campaign. He also commended the present management of the hospitals.

Mr. George H. Staart announced that a meeting would take place at the rooms of the Young Men's Christian Association, in this city, to further the cause of tract distribution, and also offered to receive at his office, No. 13 Bank street, any contributions to that end.

SHERMAN'S BATTERY .- Captain R. B. Ayres of the Fifth Artillery, (more commonly known a Sherman's Battery,) is at the Continental Hotel recruiting. The captain wishes twenty men to make up his quota. One hundred and forty-seven men constitute the full force of the battery. From the one hundred and forty-seven aforesaid are to be chosen eight sergeants and twelve corporals. Scr-vice in this battery is considered highly honorable, and recruits may be assured that they will see prompt and stirring service. A slight disturbance took place on account of the presence of an individual supposed to be in the interest of the directors, but, after the constitution has we allowed to remain some consultation, he was allowed to remain.

Is THE WIRE BRIDGE SAFE ?- During the last three or four days vast crowds have been attracted to the Wire Bridge, to witness the performances of Mr. Denier on the tight-rope. In conse quence, the capacity of the structure to resist the immense lateral and vertical pressure to which it has been subjected has been severely tested, and with results which should arrest the attention of the authorities. Several of the vertical braces which constitute the railing on the south side have been shoved entirely out of position. Unless proper repairs are speedily made, and a sufficient force of police is detailed to keep the bridge clear on all such public occasions as the one referred to, we may have a frightful accident to record ere long.

DISCHARGED.-Yesterday afternoon Captain John W. Price and Lieutenant Jackson McFadden appeared before United States Commissioner Heazlet on the charge of enticing men from the Keystone Regiment with the intention of uniting them to the Mounted Rifle Rangers. Upon examination, however, it was found that the men had not yet been mustered into service, and the parties were therefore dismissed.

lettery policy men of Philadelphia are in great tri-bulation, caused by an endeavor on the part of Ben Wood and Messrs. Eddy and France, to secure Ben Wood and Messrs. Eddy and France, to secure their business in this city. These lottery capitalists have combined their respective lotteries, and, instead of drawing four times a day, as formerly, only draw two, in consequence of the sale of tickets falling off some two thousand dollars per day. The expense attendant upon the drawing, they allege, does not pay. They now resort to a dodge to secure the business of the policy-backers, which, combined with the tickets, will largely increase their profits, besides giving them a full monopoly of the nefarious traffic. They threaten to cease drawing the numbers if their demand is not complied with. The policy-backers of this city are, as a class, ignorant men, and, it is thought, will soon succumb to the shrewd tricksters who find them plinnt tools for their own aggrandizement. Can not the authorities their own aggrandizement. Can not the authorities interfere and cheat both parties of their victims? FIRE YESTERDAY MORNING .- About half past 8 o clock, yesterday morning, a fire broke out in a one-story building, partially brick and part frame, located on the east side of Beach street, above Palmer. The structure was owned by Mr. George Stockham, and occupied by Dr. I. D. Knight as a coal-oil manufactory. The fire spread with great rapidity, and the building, as well as its contents, was entirely destroyed. The loss of Dr. Knight was about $1,000, which is partially covered by insurance. Mr. Putnam's Picture of Mr. Russell's Retreat from Bull Run.

From the Knickerbocker for September we take the following sketch of Mr. Russell, of the London Times, as he appeared to a cool observer (G. P. Putnam, the New York publisher) who was bound toward Centreville at the time our army (with Mr. Russell at the head of it) was in retreat from it: Russell at the head of it) was in retreat from it:

About half past four, possibly near five, Centreville was still (as it proved) a mile or so ahead of us. We reached the top of a moderate rise in the road, and as we plodded on down its slope, I turned a glance back along the road we had passed; a thousand bayonets were gleaning in the sunlight, and a full fresh regiment were overtaking us in double-quick step, having come up (as I soon after learned) from Vienna. They reached the top of the hill just as we began to pick our way across the brook which flooded the road in the little valley below. At this moment, looking up the ascent ahead of is, tomoment, looking up the ascent ahead of us, to-ward the battle, we saw army wagons, private ve-hicles, and some six or eight soldiers on horseback, rushing down the hill in front of us in exciting con-fusion, and a thick cloud of dust. The equestrian soldiers, it could be seen at a glance, were only im-promptu horsemen, and their steeds ware all unused to this melting mode, most of them being bare-backed. Their riders appeared to be in haste, for backed. Their riders appeared to be in haste, for some reason best known to themselves. Among them, and rather leading the van, was a solitary horseman of different aspect: figure somewhat stout, face round and bread, gentlemanly in aspect, but somewhat flushed, and impatient, not to say anxious, in expression. Under a broad-brimmed hat a silk handker-chief screened his neck like a Havelock. He rode for horse still in good condition and his motto. chief sereened his neek like a Havelock. He rode a fine horse still in good condition, and his motto seemed to be "onward"—whether in personal alarm or not, it would be impertinent to say. His identity was apparent at a glance. As his horse reached the spot where "we five" stood together, thus suddenly headed off by the stampede, the regument behind us had reached the foot of the hill, and the colonel, a large and resolute-looking man, had dashed his horse ahead of his men, until he was face to face with the stampeders.

"What are you doing here?" shouted the colonel in a tone that "meant something"—"Halt!" (to his men). "Form across the road. Stop every one of them!" Then turning to the white-faced soldiers from the field, and brandishing his sword. "Back! back! the whole of ye! Back! I say," and their horses in an instant are making a reverse movements up the hill, while the army wagons stand in statu quo; the thousand muskets of the regiment, in obedience rather to the action than the accord of the colonel, being all pointed at the group in front, in the midst of which we stand. All this and much more passed in much less time than it where to tall it

CITY ITEMS. Monthly Meeting of the Young Men's Christian Association. INTERESTING DISCUSSION UPON THE RELIGIOUS WORK AMONG THE SALDIPPS DEVIATES OF ME The regular monthly meeting of the Young Men's Christian Association of this city was held at the rooms of the Association, Chestnut street, above Tenth, last evening, Mr. George Cookman in the chair. After the usual devotional exercises, an essny was read by Mr. Robert Nicholl—subject: "Human Happiness." We did not arrive in time to hear the essay, and will, therefore, not attempt to describe it. It was spoken of, however, as a creditable effort. A letter was read from Mr. George H. Stuart, president of the Association, regretting his inability to be at his post, and urging strongly the special business of the evening, viz.: the work of Christian missions among the soldiers. Letters were also read from Messrs. Fox and Grant, two absent members, in behalf of the same object, which were followed with remarks by Mr. Wanamaker. Mr. Patterson opposed the proposed work in camps near home, in the vicinity of the city, where the men are exposed to the blighting influences of dram-shops, characterized by the speaker as "dens of damnation;" but he would go with them heart and hand in endeavoring to have our military encampments removed from the immediate vicinities of these destructive influences. Mr. Fox having tendered his resignation as chairman of the Army Committee, it was accepted, and Mr. P. B. Simons was appointed in his stead. The committee also was increased from five to ten mem-

Dr. Tyng, being invited to address the meeting upon the subject before it. rose and said, after a somewhat humorous introduction, that the Young Men's Christian Associations throughout the land were manifestly losing force; and the reasons for this were that they had nothing to do, and had been attending to matters not strictly their business. The war now precipitated upon us, he looked upon as opening a Providential field for their legitimate labor, and it ought to be occupied without delay. He believed there were few regiments in the army in which some one or more Young Men's Christian Association were not represented, which he said was favorable to the mission contemplated. He had devised a scheme for operations, which he proposed to submit. He regarded the work in two aspects: First, its local character; and second, its application to the army, at the seat of war. They had now a representative at Washington, and they ought to have efficient representatives at Fortress Monroe, Sandy Hook, Baltimore, and Cairo. The business of the agents was to do what everybody else left undone. The particular operations of these camp missions were further enlarged upon, and their practical character illustrated by incidents which have already transpired in the experience of the agent at the National Capital. He next addressed himself to the local phase of the subject. There was, he said, no place like the camp to develop the heart, to bring it out strong and full, and nowhere else in the world were there stronger friendships formed than among soldiers banded together in battling for their country. The labor to be engaged in was to be in a measure supplemental to that of the chaplains, and incidents were related to show that even the August 19th, says:

"To-day, being our regular county court day, was selected by Colonel Roger W. Hanson as an appropriate occasion for making a very inflammatory and traitorous speech. His object was to stir up a hellish spirit of war. He began with an attack upon the camp in Garrard county. He declared that, if those troops are not disbanded in thirty days, they will be put down at the point of the bayonet. He said he saw Governor Harris, of Tennesce, a few days ago, and that Harris declared that he should consider it a violation of Kentucky neutrality, and that Kentucky would have to meat 50,000 Tennessee troops in battle array if those 50,000 Tennessee troops in battle array if those knew that swearing was wrong. To make men the highest place there. Mr. Tyng said he be-lieved, with Bishop Simpson, that "the place to put the flag was right under the cross," and neither the Christian nor any other power could put it Mr. Tyng was followed by Mr. Hiram Ward. The latter said that the value of intelligent Christian labor could not be overestimated. He had no faith; however, in any forced Christian operations, which, he held, should be always calm, cool, intelligent, and from the very bottom of the soul. He said he admired the speech of their young brother from New York; he even admired his zeal; but he thought this was a wrong latitude in which to exhibit it to the best advantage. The ideas of the previous speaker were in his opinion impracticably utterly so. What had he seen on his way to the meeting last evening? Why, that one of the rooms of their hereby directed to apprehend all aliens against whom complaints may be made under said law, and to hold them in strict custody until the final order of the court, taking special care that such last evening? Why, that one of the rooms of their association was "to let," because they could not pay the rent of it. To-morrow they were to make an excursion to Atlantic City, in order to raise an excursion to Atlantic City, in order to raise money which they badly needed. This, then, was no time to incur large additional expenditures by sending out agents, etc. The brother had proposed altogether too much. The chairman of the Army Committee (already referred to) had just sent in his resignation, which showed how deep his soul was in this work. He had a better plan. "If you want," said he, "to pray with or for the soldier, put on your hat and go do it. This thing of blowing a trumpet before them, by raising committees and begging funds, and kiring men to do what no hireling could do, was all out of place." At this point, Mr. Simons, thinking that Mr. Ward was spoiling the address of Mr. Tyng, made an ineffectual effort to bring Mr. W.'s remarks to a close. The latter, however, said that as he was not only held responsible for the wisdom, but also for the folly of the association, he could not conscientiously let Brother Tyng's extravagant suggestions pass without expressing his dissent. Mr. Dale, a prominent merchant of this city, then took the floor, and stated that he thought Mr. Ward's remarks were rather a damper upon the association's proposed operations; nevertheless, he must admit that there was a good deal of truth in them. Mr. Dale gave an affecting and highly interesting account of the Military Hospital, located in Christian street, below Tenth, in a measure, we believe, under the auspices of the association, having for the last four months had the religious exercises of that institution in his own charge. There are prayer-meetings held at the Hospital daily, and worship on Sunday afternoons. Some of the scenes described by Mr. Dale, witnessed by him during his visits, were exceedingly touching, and showed the necessity of some such Christian efforts in order to mitigate the mental sufferings of poor, friendless soldiers, who are sick and dying far away from their relatives and homes, The hour of adjournment was not reached until after ten o'elock. WE HAD THE PLEASURE, recently, of visiting Bristol, and partook of the hospitalities of Mine Host of the Delaware House. We commend the establishment to our friends, who will never leave but with regret. The Proprietor, Levis J. Pratt, Gean keep a Hotel," and we know it. In my boyhood days, I visited the house, originally kept by John Bessenett, and the remembrance of a "good Hotel" still clings around me. May success attend the present proprietor! RUSSELL, OF THE LONDON TIMES .- Much has been said and written about the description of the battle at Bull Run, as published by Mr. Russell, in the London Times. From his account, it is evident that he saw very little of the affair, and, of course, was not capable, o writing a description. Every one agrees, however, in one thing, that Mr. Russell has said that the most superior and finest garments in the country can be obtained at the world-renowned Clothing Store of Granville Stokes, 609 Chestnut street. The useful gifts presented o purchasers are suitable for either ladies or gentlemen. PUBLISHING ARMY MOVEMENTS .- The Government at Washington applauds the determination of the newspapers of Philadelphia to refrain from publishing army movements. The Secretary of War has, however, made a special request that we shall continue to give publicity to the fact, that the great military clothing depot of the country is at the Brown Stone Clothing Hall of Rockhill & Wilson, Nos. 603 and 605 Chestnut street, above Sixth. The uniforms made at that celebrated establishment are peerless in respect to durability, neatness, and comfort. United States Flags and officers' sashes.
