passes through our city to-day. The grand feature of the reception, you will recollect, was to be a "soldier's-fare" dinner, complimentary to Governor Andrews, of Massachusetts But the bill of fare, as originally contemplated, has been materially improved upon, and now includes quite an appetizing array of edibles, that cannot fail to commend themselves to the discriminating palates of the "merry Andrews" who beyond a doubt will be present. This morning the residents of the dwelling No. 23 Bedford street, were horrified at finding the body Bedford street, were horrified at finding the body of Mrs. Matthews, also a resident, lying upon the floor of her bedroom, with her head in a pool of gore. The unfortunate woman, in a fit of derangement, had cut her throat with a knife, and bled to death. An inquest was held, and a verdict in accordance with the facts was rendered.

A very rich story has found its way into the papers, although redounding but little to the sagacity of our police. On the arrival of the Arago, a day or two ago, one of these Government functionaries spied a Frenchman, the contents of whose pocket, suspiciously swollen, seemed to demand official inspection. He forthwith ordered the passenger to make an expose, and was forthwith official inspection. He forthwith ordered the passenger to make an expose, and was forthwith obeyed.

At first, nothing was discovered but invoices and business papers, but in the middle of the parcel, the Argus-eyed clerk perceived a letter, whose address contained the tell-tale word—Beauregard. With such proof, there was no need of explanation; the improdent passenger was sized, and led into a priudent passenger was seized, and led into a pri-The Frenchman, meanwhile, succeeded in seizing an opportunity to ask explanations about what had happened. They thrust beneath his eyes the fatal letter, and he began at last to comprehend. The translation of the address is: "Mr. Bouderot, Beauregard street, Paris." The police, in their gnorance of the language, had taken the name of a street for the name of a man!

A mass meeting of friends of the Union, eight thousand strong, assembled at the corner of Eighty-sixth street and Fourth avenue last night, but, as your correspondent was not present, he refrains from expressing an opinion as to whether it was "enthussastic" or not!

At the meeting of the Board of Supervisors, At the meeting of the Board of Supervisors, Brooklyn, held yesterday, the sum of $15,000 was appropriated for the relief of the families of voappropriated for the relief of the families of vo-lunteers. This makes a total of $55,000, which has been appropriated by Kings county for that pur-bose up to the present time, and the total amount tepended so far is $68,578.88. The surveyor of the port has seized eight more outhern vessels since my last, viz: One steamship, one ship, two barks, one brig, and three schooners. The Hatteras prisoners still remain the cynosure of reportorial eves. of reportorial eyes.
At Bedloe's Island they occupy the untenanted barracks inside of the walls of Fort Wood, while Commodore Barron occupies a small house intended as a residence for officers. He is under special guard, but is allowed the iberty of the island. Preparations are making to fit up Fort Schuyler, better that in the event of our having to accommodate other large company of prisoners, we can put em there without delay. The Attempt on Garibaldi's Life. The last foreign arrivals brought intelligence of new attempt to assassinate Guribaldi. The parlculars of the plot are fully given in a letter to the Genoese paper, Il Movimento, written by the Sicilian hero's friend and guest, Vecchi. We "Last evening three light-horsemen arrived ere. They had heard a rumor that two ill-favored dividuals had landed on Caprera. That appeared bus mere idle gossip; they took their leave, and we went to supper. Then Stagneli and I took a troll with our cigars till eleven o'clock, and went o bed.

"About three in the morning I heard the dogs ark and jump out of their kennels. Immediately fter I fell asleep again. At five o'clock I was up, ndsaw the gens d'armes, who related to me what ad happened during the night.

"When we went to supper they had gone to the cks which command our court-yard, and stretch-it themselves out at a short distance from each her. At three o'clock they heard the sound of footens, and saw two men passing before them through te darkness, about a pistol-shot off. The guard fied out, 'Who goes there?' They answered him y a shot. The soldiers then pursued them, shouting 'Stop, in the King's name!' A voice replied a volley of obscenities. the rascals cry out, 'Holy Virgin!' Then both them scampered off with the utmost speed. "Coming up to the place where these miserables d been, the soldiers found their musket balls butied in a rock, and several prints of bloody hands on the granite. There was a bloody track running some distance along the road, a blood-stained handsome distance along the road, a blood-stained hand-kerchief, and a powder-horn.

"From the fact that the wounded men cried, Josu Maria! Ginseppe!" as they fled, the gens d'armes combaded that they were foreign assassins, and not bandits of the island.

"After the General had taken his bath we informed him what had happened. With his ordinary indifference he made light of the matter, said that he had seen the men on the rocks, begged the gens d'armes not to frighten the population of laggalena by spreading the story, and then went of to look at a little vineyard of his with a friend. "But the soldiers, by their report to the authorites, had startled the whole country; exaggerations it grew from mouth to mouth; the women brieked from their windows that the General was illed; and everybody ran to the harbor to take led; and excrybody ran to the harbor to take uge in a vessel. All the officials ran armed into p piazza, and I seemed to be looking at the blazade of the Paiace of Caserta at the period splanade of the Palace of Caserta at the period when we were having the honor to protect there the country sunity. Everybody had in his mind one single idea—the protection of that life which is the most noble in Italy, and the most necessary "Two Government sloops of war started off on a reconnoiting expedition around the island. One of them reported having seen a boat put off from the Giglio toward the island. Efforts are now making to find out the crew who sailed in it. This is all we know at present. C. A. VECCHL." COLONEL CHARLES D. JAMISON accepts the Democratic nomination for the Governorship of Maine, and lays down his platform thus: "Not only does duty but interest demand of us to stand by the country, for in a vigorous prosecution of the war is the only hope of a speedy peace. With united action and so just a cause as we possess, I believe the rebellion will be put down, the stars and stripes again float over all of the United States of America, and peace once more dispense its blessings in our beloved country." of America, and peace once more dispense its blessings in our beloved country." CITY ITEMS. SEIZURE OF REBEL PROPERTY .-- A stir was created along the wharves on Wednesday, by the seizure vessels owned in whole or in part by citizens of rebel ates. While certain men in the community are servg their own interests by playing into the hauds of aitors, others are devoting themselves to the service of Union. We know of no branch of the public service re important than the manufacture of military cloti ng, and we know of no establishment where this work dence so faithfully and satisfactorily as at the Brown Stone Clothing Hall of Rockhill & Wilson, Nos. 603 and 605 Chestrut street, above Sixth. OUR TROUBLES .- In the present season of turmoil and anxiety, when all the faculties, physical and mental, are keyed to the highest pitch of excitement, there is nothing more to the general health than the use of good and comfortable clothing, which can be purchased at all times, at the very lowest prices, at the Mammoth Gift Clothing House of Granville Stokes, No. 609 Chestnut street. With each purchase a Gift is presented. The gifts consist of every description, and are suitable for both ladics and gentlemen. Each garment sold is war-ranted in fit, fabric, and fashion. DIED-At Pottstown, Pa., August 31, 1861, HENRY POTTS, aged 64 years.

Truly can we say, in the words of the Psalmist, "Mark the perfect man, and behold the upright, for the end of the perfect man, and beside the application the custom that man is peace."

The deceased was one whose sterling qualities won the steem of all with whom he associated, alike in the business and social circle. Possessed of a mind ever sensible to the impressions of the pure and beautiful in Nature, he could not but rise into that closer communion with Nature's God. Hence religion, which was a controlling principle, was disrobed of its austerity, and in perfect peace he awaited the change which hope of a blessed immortality had robbed of all its terrors. He died, as he had lived, in the possession of a rich plenitude of reciprorated affection, his last hour soothed by those who were decreast to him on earth. decrest to him on earth.

By his death the community has lost a valuable member, the poor a liberal friend, and our country a firm supporter in this her hour of trial. Kind and courteous upporter in this her hour of trias. And and course to all, hospitable in an uncommon degree, he was a type of that rare class—a gentleman of the old school of the course the co of that rire class—a gentleman of the one sensor.

"My defence is of God, which saveth the upright in heart."
