THE PRESS-PHILADELPHIA, TUESDAY, SEPTEMBER 10, 1861.

the Guardians of the Poor are always pleasant. When not in rescion in the city, the business of the Board is transacted at the Almshouse. The room appropriated for this purpose lies adjacent to the Schuylkill front, and the ceiling being high, the hot air of the afternoon ascends, while the cool breezes from Woodlands and the river go singing through the open windows. Perpheti new hit int breezes from Woodiands and the river go singing through the open windows. Perched upon his high chair, the president has, nevertheless, a genial face, and the members, sitting by threes—they are twelve in number—make their speeches short, courteous, and pointed. Certain members of Coun-cils might learn, in these respects, from the Alms-bouse leard. ard.

With an increase of inmates in the insane depart-ment, it was reported that less but better meat was now given out than ever before. Two thousand one hundred and thirty-six pounds were given in a stated time of 1860 to 496 paupers; but in 1861, with a population of 575, only 1519 pounds. Dr. J. W. Butler, Superintendent of the insane department, made complaint of an article which appeared in one of our late issues, chiefly because the acomparison it drow between the Peensel.

the comparison it drew between the Per vania Hospital for the Insane, and the Alms vania llospital for the Insane, and the Almshouse insane department, was not finitering to the latter management. Dr. Butler says that we gave "enlirely erroneous impressious in regard to the extent to which restraining apparatus was used." He calls upon the press and the public to investi-gate the condition of the insane for themselves. We presume that he includes the "Lodgeo" in the part thrown open to the public. Much debate en-sude relative to certain increases of salary. It was stated that the pay of teachers in the lowest department of common schools, although their labors were much more difficult. Mr. Linnard thought such reopening would be hailed with jubilance by the rum-dealers over the

LEGAL INTELLIGENCE.

QUARTER SESSIONS—Judges Allison and Lud-low.—Judge Allison, yesterday morning, delivered the opinion of the court on the motion for a new trial in the case of John Donnelly, some months ago convicted on a charge of being accessory before the fact to the larceny of a quantity of furs, from the store of Mr. Davis, a furrier on Second street, near Arch. Much of the opinion was devoted to a review of the testimony given at the trial, but the main point in the defendant's motion was the fact that one of the jurors who had been empanelled to try the cause was called, near the close of the case.

that one of the jurofs who had been empanelled to try the cause was called, near the close of the case, by the district attorney, in rebuttal, and pormitted by the court, under objections from defendant's counsel, to testify. It appears the store of Mr. Davis was entered one night, and a large quantity of valuable furs carried off. Suspicion centred on two notorious burglars, named Baker and Maynes, the latter fa will afty thrown as Cocker Maynes and they wave miliarly known as Cockey Maynes, and they were errested. While under arrest, defendant and his brother, who was also indicted, but fled from trial, were

Who was also indicted, but hed from trial, were very officious in their attendance at the station-house, and in ministering to the comforts of the pri-sources. Some time afterwards the prisoners made a full confession of their guilt, gave a history of the planning and consummation of the larceny, and implicated defendant and his brother, who kept a pawnbroker's establishment in the lower part of the site as heir engaged in it and or hering shared the fruits of the crime.

Previous to this, however, suspicion had been directed to defendant by his applying to Mr. Davis to learn what reward he would give for the return to fear what reveals he would give for the return of the goods, and an arrangement was entered into between them, by which, upon the restoration of the furs to him, defendant was to receive a large sum of money. Accordingly, part of the furs were returned, and defendant was then taken into custody.

returned, and defendant was then taken into custody. On his trial, the story of Maynes and Baker was that they informed defendant of their inten-tion to commit the larceny, and requested his assistance. He agreed to furnish them with the necessary tools, and some dummy screnz, which were to be inserted in the lock of the door, and the good screws removed in the day time, so that at night the door could be pushed open, and they have a safe and speedy entrance. He was also bound to furnish them with a horse and wagon to remove the plunder, and in consideration of all this, was to receive the stolen goods at a price to be this, was to receive the stolen goods at a price to be

They allege that he performed his part of the programme, and they did theirs. It appeared, also, from the testimony, that they had first bar-gained with defendant's brother for the sale of the stolen property, but John bid higher than Joseph, and secured the prize. In consequence of this, Joseph Ponnelly, it seems, gave the information which led to the arrest of the thieves, and they, in turn. disclosed the minutize of the whole proceeding. which led to the arrest of the thieres, and they, in turn, disclosed the minutize of the whole proceeding. The defence was the previous good character of the accused, a general and emphatic denial to the statements of Maynes & Baker, and the assertion that his whole connection with them was while en-deavoring to secure the reward offered by Mr. Davis for the return of the goods. deavoring to secure the reward offered by Mr. Davis for the return of the goods. Witnesses were also called to show that at the time Maynes asserted that he was in Second street, with defendant, show-ing him the store they proposed robbing, and ar-ranging the details of the affair, he (defendant) was at entirely different and far-distant place. It was to rebut this latter testimony that the juror was called to the stand, and he testified that he saw Donnelly in Second street at or about the time fixed by Maynes, and in company with a man closely resembling and whom he believed to be him.

him. Judge Allison, in his opinion yesterday morning, on this point, said that the court was convinced that there had been no error in the admission of the testimony, and the motion for a new trial must overruled

Mr. F. C. Brewster then, on behalf of the defendant. asked that the sentence be deferred and fendant. asked that the sentence be deterred and Mr. Donnelly allowed time to settle up his business. Judge Allison, in reply, said that while he could not permit defendant to go out on bail, he would yet allow him every reasonable opportunity to set-tle his business affairs. Ho would defer his sen-tence for the present, and, in the meantime, com-mit him to the untried department of the county price.
