EXTRACT FROM THE LAST SPEECH OF STEPHEN A. DOUGLAS .--- " The conspiracy to break up the Union is a fact now known to all. Armies are being raised, and war levied to accomplish it. There can be but two sides to the contraversy. Every man must be on the side of the United States or against it. There can be no neutrals in this war. There can be none but patriots and traiters."

THE SAD NEWS OF the fatal blunder, by which on Sunday morning, loyal regiments, from our city, fired upon each other, will cause intense sorrow among the friends of the victims, and the public generally. It seems almost incredible that, after the repeated warnings we have had of the danger of such occurrences, efficient precautions are not taken to prevent them.

The Movements at Washington.

The intelligence from Washington is of a highly important and exciting character. For some reason, as yet not fully explained, the enemy withdrew from the advanced positions in the vicinity of the capital, they have occupied for several weeks past, on Friday night, and on Saturday night our troops occupied the points thus vacated. This movement may be a prelude to a general engagement; or it may indicate a disposition on the part of BEAUREGARD to choose some new point of attack : or it may be a mere ruse designed to draw our men into fatal ambuscades. We are doubtless on the eve of great events. No one can foresee how soon the armies which have been encamped almost within sight of each other will engage in a desperate and deadly conflict. But we trust and believe that, whatever may be the object of the foe, our generals will prove more wary and skilful, and our soldiers more determined and brave, than their adversaries.

The fact that they have coased to flaunt their black flag of crime and treason in sight of Washington will be hailed with joy by every loyal heart in the country, no matter what may be their motives for a retreat, and thousands of hearts will quicken with the hope that the hour is fast approaching when the nation will be thrilled with the glad news that the tide of infamy, treason, and despotism has been rolled back upon the rebellious districts, and the honor and power of the Republic vindicated and re-established.

National Confidence.

The feeling of passive confidence which the people of the loyal States now exhibit is an extraordinary indication of their power and prowess. We have educated ourselves into a just appreciation of the magnitude of this insurrection and the means to be taken for its suppression. We have tempered that feeling of impatience and petulance which we were wont to exhibit before the Manassas disaster. We have ceased to grumble with the Provident or or to make foolish demands for a change in the Cabinet; we have thrown to the winds every remnant of the old party robes; there has been a union of feeling and prejudice for the sake of the Union; we have ceased to dictate military movements to men whose lives have been spent in the army; and, what is more, we have smothered the Disunion sentiment which occasionally appeared in our midst to distract our counsels and paralyze our efforts, and at last we are one people. Could there be any more gratifying tribute to our greatness as a nation ? For we have learned to know ourselves, and this is the sum

Election. The Harrisburg Telegraph of Saturday contains an important opinion of WILLIAM M. MEREDITH, Attorney General of the State, in regard to the manner in which the volunteers IMPORTANT FROM WASHINGTON. now in camp are to be afforded opportunities for voting on the day of the general election. It will be seen that he expresses the belief that those companies and regiments which are not connected with the forces organized and commissioned by the State authorities, will not be entitled to vote-a decision which will probably excite no little indignation in some of the camps, if it is strictly adhered to. Governor CURTIN, however, has recently issued

All men now enrolled or mustered into the service of the United States, for brigades, regiments, batteries, or companies, in the State of Ponn-sylvania, under the direct authority of the Secre-tary of War, are placed under the command of the Governor of Pennsylvania, who shall organize or reorganize them as he may deem most advan-tageous to the interests of the General Govern-We trust that the men connected with what

"Since writing the above an additional question has been propounded to me, viz: Where men from several counties are in the same company, what course should be pursued? fully aroused, quite as alert as the Disunionists, and prepared for almost any contingency that may occur. The situation of affairs on the river border of the State is said by PREX-TICE to be as encouraging as could be expected or desired, and the number of Union soldiers, their officers and equipment, leads us to hope that they will be more than a match for their enemies. It is true that along the southern border of the State the traitors have, after their usual fashion, been committing new outrages and robberies, and acting more like Goths and Vandals than civilized soldiers. But if all goes well with our expeditions, they will presently find sufficient employment in defending their own homes in Tennessee. To that State they evidently lear that the seat of

The advance of General SMITH on Falls Church from the Chain Bridge was attended by events of the most deplorable character. Having passed VANDERWERCKER'S and VANDERBERG'S houses on their way to the former place, and when about half a mile from it, by some unaccountable blunder Colonel Own's Philadelphia Irish Regiment, in the darkness of the night mistaking for the rebels Captain Morr's battery, which was in the advance, sustained by General-Danna's California Regiment, Colonel BAXTER'S Philadelphia Fire Zonaves, and Colonel FRIEDMAN'S Cavalry, fired a full volley into the troops last mentioned, killing and wounding a large number. The horses attached to Morr's battery became unmanageable, and the tongues of the caissons were broken owing to the narrowness of the road. Lieutenant BRYANT, having command of the first section, ordered the guns to be loaded with grape and canister, and soon had them in range to rake the supposed enemy, when word was sent to him that he was in the company of friends. ARRIVAL OF THE U. S. SLOOP-OF-WAR BROOKLYS .- The U. S. sloop of war Brooklyn arrived at the powder wharf on Friday, and discharged her shell and powder on Saturday morning. She was towed up to the city in the afternoon, and lay to, during Saturday night and Sunday, op-posite Queen street. The Brooklyn has been out wo yours and nine months. She sailed from New York carly in 1859, with 2' guns and 259 men, being attached to the Gulf Squadron. She conveyed Minister McLane and yacht from Vera Cruz, and carried out the Lagoon exploring expedition to Pannia. She was to have carried in the troops to the relief of Anderson, but that duty was very laniely performed by the Star of the West, for which reason Fort Sumpter sud its garrison surron-dered. Had the officers of the Brooklym been entrusted with the duty, they assure us that Ander-con would have been reinforced. The Brooklym lay at Norfolk and Hampton in May last, and was employed to reinforce Fort Pickens. Since that lime she has been on the blockade, constantly licit, under steam continuously for 259 days, over-bauling and boarding vessels during day and night. She has taken three prizes—one of which, the Stet-son, was condemned and sold at Key West. She left at the mouth of the Mississippi U. At the commencement of the war, the ladies of the North displayed as much enthusiasm in their exertions to assist in the equipment of the troops as their husbands, brothers, and friends did in volunteering. Their zeal, however, naturally abated when the Government manifested its ability to promptly furnish supplies of most of the articles needed; but a period has again arrived when their voluntary aid may be vitally important to the health and comfort of thousands of our soldiers, and when they may do much good by supplying winter stockings or socks, and blankets. The extraordinary demand for these articles which was created by the war has not only exhausted the shelves of our merchants, but rendered it impossible for manufacturers to make up new supplies as soon as they are needed. If the ladies of our country, and particularly of our State, do not liberally respond to the appeal of the Quartermaster General, much suffering Mrs. Garrettson, we believe, though she lightens will be inevitable. We are glad to know that her labors by this managerial change, continues sole thousands are now engaged in knitting woollen socks, and we also notice that several donations of blankets have been made to Quartermaster CROSSMAN, of this city, as well as to Quartermaster General HALE, at Harrisburg. The latter officer superintends the supplies of volunteers from our State. In a l. tter of the 24th inst., he acknowledges the receipt of two boxes containing one hundred and eighteen blankets, which were a donation from the ladies of Lewisburg and vicinity, for the soldiers at Camp Curtin. Gen. HALE says that-

"Every exertion has been made to procure army blarkets for the troops, but so great has been the demand that the ordinary sources of supply failed to meet our wants. We have endeavored to start to meet our wants. We have endeavored to start every loom in the State capable of making army blankets, and hope in time to have a full supply, but the troops in camp require immediate relief. We cannot, then, too warmly express our thanks to your association for your prompt and timely dona-tion; and trust that other kindred associations throughout our whole State will follow your poble throughout our whole State will follow your noble example and contribute to relieve the necessities of those who have left the comforts of home, to fight for our country, our flag, and the Govorn ment of our choice.

Among other facts which she states is the following :

"A lady just returned from one of the south-eastern counties of Virginia says that all the schools have been broken up long ago; the boys are in the army, and the girls are at home knitting socks; that wherever you go the ladies meet you at their doors and gates with the needles going; the ser-rents in the house and on the plantetion are equal vants in the house and on the plantation are equal-

She adds that "we will not knit because they do, but we will not let them outdo us." Surely the ladies of the North will be not less active in promoting the comfort of the soldiers of freedom than the ladies of the South are in providing for the wants of the traitors.

The Batteries on the Potomac.

The enemy are reported to have planted several powerful batteries on the shores of the Potomac. Some of them were probably originally erected to prevent the Union forces from landing at important points on the Virginia shore, and others for aggressive purposes. It is no doubt part of their plan to control and prevent the navigation of the river, so that if by any misfortune to our arms direct communications between Washington and the North are cut off, they can also render it difficult and dangerous to send succor from the sea to a beleaguered capital. Account of Munson's Hill. Munson's Hill is one of those small eminences that formerly constituted the neutral ground between our lines and the enemy's, two miles from Builey's Cross Roads. The approaches to the hill are gradual, and in a strategic view its position is of minor importance. Munson's house is situated at the side of the hill.

They first occupied the hill on the Monday preceding the 31st of August. The Maryland regiment that made the advance was supported on Tuesday by five thousand rebols-chiefly Marylanders and Virginians-under Gen. LONGSTREET About twenty lives were lost on both sides in its occupation. No effort being made to dislodge the

The Object of the Rebel Retreat. Various speculations are rife as to the whereabouts of the rebel army, as no traces of thom can be discovered in large force, occasional pickets of infantry and cavalry only being dissernible at distant points, hovering as if for the purpose of observation. The most probable theory is, that, from what can be gathered, the robels are making feints of retreat, as they did previous to the battle of Bull Run, with the view of drawing our troops into ambuscades. This opinion is strengthened by the repetition of a conversation which a farmer residing in the neighborhood of Falls Church over heard the day before
