We cannot fail to discover the exact similarity of the arguments of the pro-slavery advocates now, and two thousand years ago, and we are forced irresistibly to conclude that the arguments of inferiority do not arise from accident of color or race, but is a consequence of the system itself, as in the cases above quoted. Homer, Plato, and Aristotle advocated the natural inferiority of men of their own race, blood, and color. The condition of the slave in ancient Rome was, if possible, worse than in Greece. With no sales of cotton, pork at forty dollars a barrel, hay at fifty dollars a ton, and all things else at monstrous prices, the banks in a state of suspen- sion, and all the operations of Government con- ducted on treasury notes, with no ascertainable basis, the people of New Orleans, it is easy to see, could hardly change their condition without finding it improved.—Louisville Journal. the Greek ideas of the natural inferiority of the

The condition of the slave in ancient Rome was, if possible, worse than in Greece. While holding the Greek ideas of the natural inferiority of the slave, the Romans far exceeded the Greek in cru-elty and barbarity. The Roman master held the power of life and death. History relates several notable instances in which it was exercised. A Se-nator of Rome, Quintius Flaminius, put a slave to the death through caprice in the midst of a festival. Vedius Pollio, in the reign of Tiberius, caused one of his slaves to be thrown into a flab-pond, because he accidentally broke a glass of crystal. At Rome, whenever a master was assassinated, all of his slaves, guilty and innocent, were condemned to die. Tacitus relates: When Pedamis Secundus was assassinated by one of his slaves, not less than four hundred, according to custom, were crucified. Such was the condition of the ancient world when Christianity began its mission of freedom, civiliza-tion, and emancipation. tion, and emancipation.

The Very Rev. Father McHugh, V. G. [For The Press.]

To inscribe the name upon a cold slab, and to record in the columns of a public journal the death of a dear friend, form a part of the sad duties which the living owe to the virtuous dead. To extol departed sanctity, and to keep in memory piety that is gone by, seems to be but the result of the high estimation in which it was held; and the glorious tribute of that grateful recollection will never fail to transmit to posterity, for the imitation of the virtuous, the good works of charity and love which have been wrought by those whom and love which have been wrought by those whom God, in his mercy, has called to their reward. We might eater largely into a detail of the pri-vate and public life of the Very Reverend Father McHugh, Vicar General of the diocese of Kilmore, Ireland, and P. P. of Knockninney, the subject of this notice, but we prefer to leave the matter in the hands of a more competent person. It will be done, no doubt, by one of his parishioners or friends who knew him better, but could not esteem more than the writer of this simple paragraph, whose design is rather to sympathize with the relatives and friends of the lamented deceased, and to hear tes-timeny to his zeal, charity, and love, while living, for the church which he faithfully served, and the poor whom he so benevolently assisted, than to cram the columns of a newspaper even with well-merited eulogiums. To tell the surviving mourners of the Very poor moments of a newspaper even with well-merited eulogiums. To tell the surviving mourners of the Very Reverend deceased that the higher duty which the church owes to the memory of the faithful priest was promptly attended to at the Church of St. Joackim, Frankford, of which the Rev. John McGovern (cousin german to the deceased) is pastor, is the chief object which the writer has in view. The solemn requirem mass was effered up on the morn-ing of the 9th inst., Rev. Mr. McGrane being culturant, Rev. Messrs. Relly and Dougherty act-ing as deacon and sub-deacon, and Rev. Mr. Kie-rans master of ceremonics. We noticed in the sanctuary, besides, Rev. Messrs. Cantwell, St. Philip's; Lance, St. Thereas's; Hugh McLaugh-lin, St. Anne's, Richmond; O'Haran, St. Paul's; McAninney, Blacker, Daly, Moran, Brady, Kelly, &c. The Rev. John McGovern, pastor, made a very appropriate address, and spoke with great warmth upon the virtues of the deceased. Thus it will be seen that in a land far distant. and in a church far remote from the scene of the Very Reverend gentleman's life and labors, his demine did not meas uncelling and heat the sole of the Very Reverend gentleman's life and labors, his demine did not meas uncelling and heat distant. Bod in a church far remote from the scene of the Very Reverend gentleman's life and labors, his demise did not pass unnoticed, nor was his soul left to wend its way to the throne of the Judge unac-companied by the prayers and petitions of pious hearts, keeping up that communion of souls which forms such a beautiful feature in the Catholic Church. Let us imitate his virtues while we land bis niety, and aspire to enjoy, as he did the ergon Church. Let us initiate his virtues while we laud his piety, and aspire to enjoy, as he did, the grace of a happy death. B. T. H.

FRANKFORD, October 9, 1861. The Truth Regarding the Offer Made to Gambaldi.

A Paris correspondent of the New York Times, under date of September 27, says :

We have at length arrived at the truth in regard to the Garibaldi affair. In the first place, friends of Garibaldi intimated to the Government at Wasn' of Garibaldi intimated to the Government at Wasa-ington long ago that the General took a deep inte-rest in the struggle between the Union and Slavery, and that, without doubt, he could be induced to lend his powerful aid to the National arms. The fact was stated in such a way that the Government regarded it as an offer of services, and feeling deeply sensible for such a mark of confidence and good-will on the part of the great Italian leader, ordered a negotiation to be commenced in regard to the matter. This negotiation, on account of his personal ac-quaintance with Garibaldi and his knowledge of European languages, was confided to Mr. Sanford, minister to Belgium. Mr. S. was authorized to make terms with Gen, Garibaldi for the command of a division of the American army, and was charged, give a good and sufficient bond for the fulfillment of the contract, and to receive Treasury notes or other Govern-ment funds in payment for the Cattle. The first delivery of the Cattle will be required to be made about the 10th of November, 1861. se30-t021
