Trial of the First of the Purates. Yesterday morning, the trial of Walker W. Smith-one of the crew of the pirate-ship Jeff. Davis, captured on board the schooner Enchantress—commenced in the United States Circuit Court, before Judges Grier and Cadwalader. At an early hour the court-room was crowded, and great interest was manifested in the pro-The indictment against the defendant charges that he did, on the 6th of July, 1861, make a piratical and felonious attack upon a ship belonging to citizens of the United States, and assaulting the men employed thereon To this indictment the accused pleaded "not guilty," and when the usual question was put to him, "How will you be tried?" he replied, " By God and my coun-

The jurors were then called to the box; each juror being sworn on his roir dire, and asked whether he had formed or expressed any opinion in regard to the guilt or innocence of the accused, and whether he had expressor any opinion in reference to the transaction out of which the prosecution originated. Their names are as follows: 7. John M. Miller,

1. Horatio Jones,
2. Lewis B. Pretz,
3. William Kinsey,
4. Attred J. White,
5. John Franklin,
6. John R. Paul,
The case for the Government was then opened by J.
Hubby Ashton, Esu, the Assistant District Attorney, who referred to the grave nature of the charge the jury was assembled to try, and the hope he had entertained that the learning and ability of the District Attorney would have been employed in the trial of this case, but, as the jurors were well aware, it had been otherwise or dered. He narrated the circumstances of the sailing of the Enchantress from the port of Boston, and her capture by the rebel privateer Jeff. Davis on the afternoon of the 6th of July last.
On that afternoon a strange sail was discovered by the look-out on the schooner, which rapidly overhanded the schooner and ordered her to lay to. A boat was then lowered from the rebel privateer, on which the French flag was flying, and six men armed to the teeth, leaning into the lowered from the rebel privateer, on which the French flag was flying, and six men armed to the teeth, leaping into the boat, put off from the side of their vessel and boarded the schooner, and, demanding the papers of the schooner, an-mounced her to be the prize of the Jeff. Davis, on which the French flag having been hauled down, the flag of the called Southern Confederacy was then flying.

The captain and crew of the schooner were then trans-The captain and crewof the schooner were then transferred to the privateer, but afterwards the colored cook was transferred to the schooner, and the prize crew were ordered to make sail. The schooner then made sail for some Southern port, and on the 22d of July a sail was discovered, which afterwards proved to be the United States gumboat Albatross. It was arranged by the prize crew that they should personate the captain and crew of the schooner; if that failed to prevent recapture, they the schooner; if that failed to prevent recapture, they would scuttle and sink the schooner.

As the United States vessel approached, the colored cook, Garrick, was ordered to go below, but refused to go, and afterwards jumped into the sea, and was picked up by the gunboat, and then announced that the schooner was the prize of the Jeff Davis. She was afterwards brought into this port for adjudication. On the same day of the capture of the schooner by the Jeff. Davis, she captured the brig John Weish, of Philadelphia, and taking her captain and crew from her, they placed a prize-crew on board of her, and ordered her to sail for a Southern port.

ang net captain and crew from her, they placed a prize crew on board of her, and ordered her to sail for a South-crn port.

On the 8th of July the bark Mary Goodell was also captured by the Jeff. Davis, and the captain and mate of the Enchantress, and also those of the John Welsh, were placed on board of her, and she was allowed to depart, and afterwards made the port of Portland, Maine, from whence they have come to testify.

Mr. Ashton then took up the general charge of piracy, and defined it as divided into two classes. Let, As an offence against the law of nations, and 2A, As a statutory offence. He then read the third section of the soft of Congress of May 15, 1820, defining and prescribing the punishment for the crime of piracy.

Mr. Ashton further stated that no pretence of authority for his actions that the cefendant could advance could either justify or excuse his conduct. He [Mr. Ashton] held in his hand the statute book of the United States, and in that he found the section that this defendant had violated. The Constitution and the laws of the United States were the supreme law of the land, and no State or community of States could absolve themselves from its operation. No other doctrine, he was sure, could be advanced in this court, or heeded by its jury. He asked, therefore, that if they should find that the defendant had violated that law, they would nete out to him the punishment ic meritud, by rendering a vertilet of guilty. His address then closed. address then closed.

Counsel for the defendant then asked that the witnesses for the Government should be removed from the court grown, and not examined in each others' hearing. This the court granted, and ordered the marshal to remove them to an adjoining room, to be produced as called for.

A number of witnesses were called, the first being Benjamin Pavis, sworn.—I am a part owner of the Enchantress; she was built at Portland in 1858; she was corolled at Newburyport; all her owners are citizens of the United States, so far as I know; it would be impossible for me to give all the names of the owners; I own dive-sixteenths; she has always, so far as I know, sailed

U. S. STEAMER FLAG, OFF CHARLESTON. Oct 16.
Yesterday we saw a ship standing in, cridently intending to run the blockade. We started in pursuit, but they succeeded in running her ashore, and all hands landed before overtaking her. We boarded her, and found her to be the ship Thomas Wattson, formerly ST Philadelphia, of and for Charleston, from Liverpool, laden with salt, flannel, and blankets we succeeded in getting on board the Flag, and then set the ship on fire, which is now burning, and nearly consumed. The U S sloop-of-war Vandalia will shortly leave for Philadelphie, All enjoy good health.

FINANCIAL AND COMMERCIAL. THE MONEY MARKET.

PHILADELPHIA, October 22, 1861. Reading Railroad shares fell off 3, at the opening to-day, owing to the depressing effect of the war news, and the market generally sympathized in the fell. As the day wore on, and the real extent of the news was better understood, a slight reaction took place, and the market closed with a firmer feeling. Pennsylvania Railroad stock was firm at 37%—an advance of %. City loans were in less request, and sold at 91% for the new issues. Ponnsylvania State fives were heavy at 76%. The purchase of the National Loan still continues without diminution, at the Sub-Treasury and the agency, while the patriotic arrangements of Messrs. Drexel & Co. to supply customers with any or all denominations of the Loun certificates, at the price of par and accrued interest, in exchange for bankable funds, adds materially to the total amount disposed of. Some five millions of dollars in all have thus far been sold in Philadelphia, independently of the bank subscriptions. The New York Tri-We cannot hear of any action on the part of the Bank Committee to consider the propriety of taking the third fifty millions of the National Loan at once. The matter committed to them has been discussed, but they have arrived at no conclusion. There appears to be no doubt that various propositions have been made to Mr. Chase in regard to the $100,000,000 of stock which he is authorized to be none of which are acceptable. The which are to issue, none of which are acceptable. The whole, or certainly one-half could be placed at once at 7 per cent, but the Secretary believes he can obtain better terms. In the mean time, our banks think they should far their own safety control this issue, but do not seem as yet realy to meet the low views of the Secretary.
