A Battle Expected at Yorktown. A private letter received in this city yesterday, from an officer attached to our army now stationed on the Peninsula, conveys the intelligence that, on the morning of the 13th, General Magruder stated, in a general order which was read to his command, in a general order which was result to his command, that he was in possession of reliable information of the landing, at Fortress Monroe, of seventy pieces of rifle cannon and five hundred artillery horses. The fact was considered as one of significant importance by the commanding general, who expressed the fullest reliance upon the patriotism of would be granted, under any circumstances, until after New Year. It was rumored, last evening, that fighting had actually commenced between the opposing forces at Yorktown, and the statement of passengers from Williamsburg that a cannonade had been distinctly heard there early yesterday morning was cited in confirmation of the truth of the report, but we were unable to trace it to any source entitled to credence.

The first formal declaration of Independence in the struggle between the American colonies and the mother country was made in Mecklenburg, North Carolina, and the following declaration, recently made in Hyde county, of the same State, while it is an eloquent enumeration of the wrongs inflicted by the traitors of 1861, may possibly also obtain great historic importance : REPORT OF A SELECT COMMITTEE APPOINTED BY

We repudiate the unwarranted arrogation of authority asserted by these bold, bad mem—traitors alike to the Federal Union and to the people of North Carolina. We disclaim or disown all participation or acquiesence in the twofold treachery; and we now and hereby reaffirm our innlicenable allegiance to the Government of the United States, and resume all those elements and parts of sovereignty which belong, in subordination for the National Constitution, to the freemen of this

MARBLE NASH TAYLOR, CALEB B. STOWE, WILLIAM O'NEIL, Select Committee. HATTERAS, Hyde county, N. C., Oct. 15, 1861. How our Soldies Recovered Stray Mules

from a Rebel Camp. A Cairo correspondent of the Herald says:

I heard a good story of two of our soldiers, at Paducuh, yesterday, which will pay for its space in repeating. When our troops first received their teams they were troubled to procure forage; so the mules were turned loose or tethered in the outskirts of the town. Occasionally a few would be missing, until Uncle Sam found himself minus some twenty-five or thirty. Those which strayed away were cought up by the rebel speculators and taken to Blandville, back of Columbus, where they had accumulated some fifty stolen and purchased taken to Blandville, back of Columbus, where they had accumulated some fifty stolen and purchased animals, which were under some five or six koepers. The two privates mentioned (members of the Fortieth Illinois volunteers), hearing of the whoreabouts of the stock, asked General Smith's permission to attempt their recapture, which, with some misgivings, was granted. The boys, dressed in the garb of Kentucky farmers, went and surveyed the field and fold, and set to work. They had whisky with them—whisky such as Kentucky rebels like to get and fold, and set to work. They had whisky with them—whisky such as Kentucky rebels like to get drunk on, good old Bourbon—and the first object was to get them as comfortably tight as possible, which was not long in being accomplished. Then the boys went to the mule yard, let down the bars, mounted two of the best, without saddle or bridle, and started for Paducah, the whole lot following at a break-neck pace, and braying in the most diabolical chorus. The keepers were not long in discovering the trick, and gave chase as far as they deemed it prudent toward our lines, but to no purpose; and in good season Saturday afternoon the boys made their appearance at tien. Smith's headquarters to report, their faces beaming with a glow of satisfactheir appearance at Oat. Simin a headquarters to report, their faces beaming with a glow of satisfac-tion hard to descrice. Their report was a con-densation of Laconism; so I will give the dialogue: Gen. Smith. "Well, boys, what luck?" Soldier. "We got 'em, and more too." Gen. Smith. "How many did you get?" Soldier. "Verty I reckon: haint counted 'em."

Gen. Smith. "We got 'em, and more too."
Gen. Smith. "How many did you get?"
Soldier. "Forty, I reckon; haint counted 'em."
Gen. Smith. "But that is more than we have lost. You didn't steal any, I hope."
Soldier. "Steal! K.ristophor, steal! No. sirree; but you see we didn't have time to put the bars up after we had got Uncle Sam's out, and the things would foller."
Then the General drew on an clongated counterment the bars up the had been a Then the General drew on an clongated counto-nance, and, as sternly as though he had been a judge and was sentencing a culprit to a lifetime of imprisonment, lectured the soldier roundly for imprisonment, lectured the soldier roundly for using profane language in the quarters and pre-sence of a general officer. The soldier took the lecture uneasily, twirling his hat nervously the while, and, when the General had "subsided," apologized as follows:

''You see, General, we have had to cuss the things all day to git 'em into camp, and it's mighty hard to quit off all of a suddenly.'' hard to quit off all of a suddenly."

Then the General's rigidity relaxed; a smile, or rather a laugh, came up from his heart, and tried to escape from the corners of his mouth; but discipline is discipline with an old army officer, and it would not do to allow such a breach of decorum to pass unnoticed; but in consideration of the recaptured twenty-five, "and more too," he did not inflict the corner austicipation on up them. any severe eastigation or put them under arrest, but, thanking them for the services rendered, diso the National Constitution, to the freemen of this sed them with a caution to leave their profanity the boys left, declaring, as they closed the door, that "such a pious old cuss hadn't any business to
