at all without the assent of Congress. To pay the expenses of the proposed fortifications, the States must. of course, resort to loans. The effect produced by the competition of a principal with his own agents has already been illustrated by the embarrassments attending that system in the raising of volunteers, and in the pro-curing of clothing and other supplies for them. To throw several of the States on the money market, in direct competition with the large loans necessary to be made by the General Government, especially under the discourseing influence which the publication of your latter may have on public oredit, is an experiment which must lead to embar-rassments of a similar kind, but probably more in-jurious. General Nelson in his address to them assured them of his conviction that they had been misled by mis-chievous demagogues, and the Secessionists, catch-ing the cue from him, now throng in crowds to take the oath, all protesting that their credulity has been played upon, and that they are anxious to be-come true and loyal citizens. Without questioning their sincerity, it is remarkable in what a short time after the arrival of the Federal forces they

Very respectfully, your obedient servant, A. G. CURTIN.

Adventure of a Spy. [The following letter from one of the Ohio soldier boys appears in the Cincinnati Commercial : CAMP RED HOUSE, Nov. 6, 1861. We left this place last week and started for Camp Franklin, which is about twenty miles distant, leaving two companies here to guard the town. I remained there about three days, when, as I was cating supper on the evening of the third day, the adjutant came to me and said the colonel wanted the adjutant came to me and said the colonel wanted to see me as soon as possible. I went up to headquar-ters. The colonel maked if I would go to the rebel camp as a spy? I told him yes. I then procured a suit of Virginia clothes and a good revolver, and was ready. The colonel passed me outside of the pickets. I travelled about six miles, when I came to a big cornfield. It was then about three o'clock, and, as I was somewhat tired, I concluded to take a nap. I got some of the corn. stalks and piled them together, which by the way, made a tolerably good but very cold bed. I got up, early and started off again. I travelled about four miles when I came to a turn in the road, and saw a men directly shead with a gun. My first move-ment was to take to the woods, but as I was about to do this two men came out of a house on the other
