The London Times on American Affairs. [From the London Times, Nov. 7.] It did not need the information of our own correspondent in New York to convince us of the fact of which he informs us, not now for the first time, that what is called "the public mind" in the Northern States of America is very ill-disposed towards this country. We might have gathered the fact from Mr. Seward's circular to the Governors of the States, advising them, in substance, to prepare themselves for an attack by Great Britain. As there was nothing whatever in the relations between the two countries to justify this proceeding, we could only suppose that the thing was done for the purpose of manufacturing capital, and, of course, this manucurre could only succeed if there existed in "the public mind" a strong wish to pick a quarrel with us. To say the truth, this appalling revelation has not burst upon us with quite as much suddenness as some of our American friends seemed to suppose. Indeed, we cannot fix upon the time when "the public mind"—that is, the mind of the governing class—in America, did not evince symptoms of the same tendency. We are very sorry for it, but we honestly confess for a great many years we have been convinced, and that by proofs far too strong to admit of doubt, that we stand very low in the good graces of the multitudinous monarch of the United States. The hearty sympathy and assistance lent by American citizens to the rebellion of the French Canadians in Lower Canada, the violent language held with regard to the disputed boundary of Oregon, the refusal to allow the right of search, which has almost defeated our well-meant efforts to repress the slave trade, and the seizure of the Island of San Juan by an arméd force while the dispute as to its ownership was pending between the two Governments, have long convinced us that peace between England and the United States is only to be maintained by submission to many violations of the comity and many of the rights of nations. We have borne all these things patiently, and we do not regret it. We have preserved the peace, perhaps, sometime It did not need the information of our own respondent in New York to convince us of the facnot think to take us by surprise when they inform us that they do not like us. They have so long "dissembled their love" there is no occasion to "kike us downstairs" in order to prove that it no longer exists. The fact is, the ill-will of the United States is like the poverty of the Scotch poot: "They're sae accustom'd wi' the sight, The view o't gies them little fright."

We have got used to it, and regard it, like our we have got used to it, and regard it, like our wet summers and foggy autumns, as an evil insepa-rable from our position. Still, it is desirable to know in the words of the November number of the Atlantic Monthly, "Why has the North felt ag-grieved at England?" First, then, we are told that the English press very early announced the hopeless partition of the Union as an event accomthat the English press very early announced the hopeless partition of the Union as an event accomplished and irrevocable. Further, this opinion seemed to imply that the division of the Union must take place according to terms dictated by the Secceders. Again, England seems to think that the South stands to the North somewhat in the same position as the American colonies did to the Government of George III. These are the grounds, to which our correspondent draws our attention, of the ill-will which is felt towards us in the United States, and he remarks truly that such an alienation between Great Britain and the United States, expanding through mutual misapprehension until it has reached a stature to command the action of the Government, is an evil to the cause of liberty and good government. It is an evil, but how are we to help it? It is not alleged—at least in the Atlantee Monthly—that we have done any act in our public capacity, or, indeed, that any individual has done any act, evineing the slightest wish to violate the neutrality between North and South. Statements to this effect have been repeatedly circulated by the American press, but have invariably proved to be utterly void of foundation. No, our fault is of another and a deeper die. In acts we have been neutral and impartial, but we have had the presumption to form an opinion, and, having formed it, to publish it, for the general benefit of all who may care to agree with or differ from it. Now, it appears, according to the Atlantic Monthly, that the condition of avoiding that amount of ill-feeling in the American mind which will ultimately drive the Government to hostile action against us is, that we should either form no opinion at all on American affairs, or that our opinion should be in exact accord with the form no opinion at all on American affairs, or tha our opinion should be in exact accord with the views of the dominant party in the Northern We, on the other hand, maintain that the North ern States ought not to hate us, even if they find that we do not sympathize with the views in pur-suance of which the great Confederacy is tearing itself to pieces. Were we the enemies they affect the time of the control of the contr to whichever side victory incline, its reconstruction on the old basis is impossible, for the simple reason that the Southern States, if conquered, cannot be treated as equals in political power to the Northern, and that without such equality a return to the ormer state of things is impossible. We also think that, as revolution is inevitable, it had better come in the form which would most speedily arrest the effusion of blood. We further think—and every word of the Atlantic Monthly confirms us in the opinion—that the contest is really for empire on the side of the North, and for independence or that of the South and is this research. it such equality a Servest the effusion of blood. We further think—and every word of the Attantic Monthly confirms us in the opinion—that the contest is really for empire on the side of the North, and for independence on that of the South and in this respect we recognize an exact analogy between the North and the Covernment of George III., and the South and the Thirteen Revolted Provinces. These opinions may be wrong, but they are the general opinions may be wrong, but they are the general opinions of the English nation, a nation speaking the same language as the North, connected with them by many ties, and probably better able than any other to form an estimate of the present situation. Would not the North do more wisely, instead of saying. "Sympathize with us, or we shall hate yon; hold opinions in accordance with ours, or we will oblige our Government, nothing lath, to make war szeinet you." to look at the matter on the other side? Is it not just possible that, although we do not hate the North for holding an opinion different from our own, nor find their doing so to be at once "humiliating and exasperating," we may be in the right after all? We have some advantages in forming a judgment which are not shared by those who differ from them We have a long experience of dependencies and alliances of every kind. We are not fin a passion, and we are quite able to conceive that those who differ from us may be houset—nay, possibly may be right. The North sadmit that her war policy has the almost unanimous verdict of England against it. Is not that a better reason for reconsidering their opinion than for hurning us at the stake for the heresy of our censors, who will evidently be content with northing short of recanstation or marryrdom—as, in fact, we can hardly make our position worse—we may as well make a clean breast of our opinion on another subject. It is thought a glorious thing that the language are ready to subscribe at the text. may as well make a clean breast of our opinion on another subject. It is thought a glorious thing that the banks are ready to subscribe at the rate of five millions sterling a month towards a loan of three millions sterling a mouth towards a loan of thirry millions—no great sum, after all, for a wealthy community to raise; but we are bound to say that, when we consider the self-gratulation which this wonderful instance of patriotism has called forth, we are also struck by the fact that of all the vast expenditure already incurred on behalf of the war not a single dollar of principal or interest has been raised by increased taxation. It is hoped that the new taxes, when they come into effect, will suffice to keep down the interest; but as for the principal, that, it seems agreed on all hands, effect, will suffice to keep down the interest; but as for the principal, that, it seems agreed on all hands, le to be berrowed. We should have thought more of the patriotism of the present war had we seen a little more disposition manfally to confront its burdens. Patriotism courts sacrifices for the good of its country, and would scorn to take credit for an expenditure which is wholly laid on posterity. Equally strange to us is it to find a nation able to persuade itself that it is any richer because it has increased its exports and diminished its imports, or because it has imported more gold and exported less than usual, more especially when a large portion of the revenue of that nation, involved in an expensive war, consists of customs' duties on imports. These war, consists of customs' duties on imports. These are the exploded fallacies of the mercantile theory the confusion between money and wealth, and the confusion between national prosperity and what is called a favorable balance of trade. A nation is often a gainer by increasing its imports, as the American Government would be if it bought the clothing of its troops cheap and good in Europe, instead of, in obedience to a Protectionist cry, dear and bnd in the United States. The strangest thing of all is that, on their own statement, the Americans should suppose that they will long be able to retain any considerable quantity of the precious metals. They are exporting largely, they are importing little—both which things tend to diminish the present stock of commodities. They have drawn away a wast number of hands from the production and turned them to the destruction of wealth. These things surely tend to diminish the purchasing value of money, and to drive it abroad in search of lower prices. We presume that this also is an opinion that we have no right to form or express? -the confusion between money and wealth, and the ool Sale at Boston. Bushing. Nov. 19.—A large sale of wool was made to-day at auction by Bingham, Joy, & Sanford, and attracted about 250 buyers. The bidding was about equally divided between manufacturers and traders, for the coarser grades used for army purposes, and prices were unusually high. For the finer grades bids were lower than anticipated, although very fair prices were obtained. LECTURE ON CHINA AND JAPAN.-We have been requested to state that a free lecture upon the Objects and Modes of Worship, and the Manners and Customs of the Chinese and Japanese 11 will be delivered by the Rev. John Liggins, Missionary of the Episcopal Church to China, this evening, at half past 7 o'clock, in Emmanuel P. E. Church, Marlborough street, above Girard avenue; the lecture to be illustrated by large native pictures, idols, et celera. The Richmond cars pass within a few steps of this church. DR. CHAPIN ON "THE ELEMENTS OF NA-TIONAL LIFE."—The appearance of Rev. E. H. Chapin, D. D. at Concert Hall this evening, in a lecture on "The Elements of National Life," will be an occasion which no one who enjoys a fine specimen of oratory can afford to miss. Dr. Chapin is one of the most eloquent men of the present age, and his theme to-night, under the existing circumstances of the nation, will doubtless evoke one of his most brilliant platform achievements. The lecture will attract an immense audience. MR. C. H. MATTSON, dealer in fine family roceries. Arch and Tenth streets, has now on hand a choice lot of Tens, of Oolong and other brands. Persons purchasing dried meats, fruits, wines, or any other goods in the grocery line, of Mr. Matteon, may rely upon getting a pure article, and in all respects as represented. GRANVILLE STOKES,
