A PULPIT SKETCH. Rev. Thomas H. Stockton, D. D.—His Last Sermon in Philadelphia.

BY GRAYBEARD. One of the most imposing pulpit scenes witnessed in Philadelphia for a long time was the occasion of Rev. Dr. T. H. Stockton's closing sermon in Philadelphia. on Sunday evening, the 24th ult., prior to resuming his duties as chaplain of the National House of Representatives at Washington. Dr. Stockton, strangely enough, exhibits increasing mental vigor as his physical powers decline. He is at once a brilliant analytical thinker, a devoted and fearless preacher, a wonderful orator, a poet, and an independent theologian, and sooms daily to sustain these characteristics in a higher degree. His election-we may say his repeated re-elections—to the Congressional chaplaincy are not more complimentary to him than they are creditable to the appreciative sagacity of that august body. He is, in fact, the clergyman among ten thousand for that position. Wholly independent in his ecclesiastical views, he offends no one by even the accident of denominational bias; singularly grave and devout in person, he impresses all who see him with the sanctity of his office; possessing the fertility of true genius, every subject he touches is invested with interest; classic in his rhetoric, and almost faultless in his elecution, he holds and pleases the most cultivated ear; selfmade, he represents the genius of our institutions; polished and affable in his social intercourse, he wins and retains the esteem of citizens and statesmen irrespective of section or creed. The occasion which we are here about to notice was peculiar and impressive. Dr. Stockton has for years past, in consequence of his ecclesiastical isolation, been laboring among a comparatively small congregation, in a "Pilgrim's Progress" sort of style, their last stopping place being at the hall on the northwest corner of Girard avenue and Thirteenth street, where they have succeeded in astablishing an interesting and largely-attended Sunday-school. In order that the latter might be better cared for, the congregation of St. Mark's Lutheran Church, Spring Garden and Thirteenth streets, has been solicited to assume the guardianship of this youthful flock during the Doctor's absence. This appeal was responded to with great kindness by the people of St. Mark's, (late in charge of Rev. Dr. Krauth—now editor of The Lutheran-who has just been succeeded by the Rev. Mr. Krotel, of Lancaster,) and, on the last Sunday evening in November, the church of the latter was placed at the disposal of Dr. S. and his congregation, for the better presentation of the Sun-day-school interest above referred to, and the farcwell words (for the present) of the pastor to his

The church was filled in every part. When the de-tolional services—conducted by Rev. Dr. Krauth— were concluded, the venerable-looking, though not aged minister, so feeble in body as to be obliged to deliver his sermon sitting, prefaced his discourse with a few impromptu remarks. The choir had just concluded the hymn containing these beautiful

Blest be the fic that binds
Our hearts in Christian Love;
The fellowship of kindred minds
Is like to that above."

The preacher, repeating the last two of these lines, and giving the "is" in the latter with his peculiar arched emphasis, said, the enjoyment of this was heaven upon earth. He continued: I have just neaven upon earth. He continued: I have just closed my fifth year of irregular ministerial services this time in Philadelphia. During this interval we have worshipped in National Hall, in Jayne's Hall, in Washington Hall, in Handel and Haydn Hall, in the Assembly Buildings, and in the little hall where we now are on the corner of Thirteenth and Clired earths. Where we now are on the corner of Thirteenth and Girard avenue—anywhere in fact, where we could find refuge. If I ask why this has been? I shall probably be told, "Partly on account of your delicate health; partly on account of your absence; but chiefly because of the fact that you belong to have "a fact." he actional to none of us." "And yet," he continued, "I should very gladly belong to any, and desire above anything else to belong to all.

After serving a congregation some time since, they determined to make me a life member by tho contribution of fifty dollars, by as many members contributing the sum of one dollar each, and so I contributing the sum of one dollar each, and so I was made, and suppose am now, a member of the John Street Methodist Episcopal Church. Any one, every one, so it be one of God's Love. A congregation that has no church of its own may occasionally borrow one. It is in this way that we are permitted to meet here to-night. We have a Sabbath School in which I feel a deep interest; this congregation has generously consented to take it under its fostering care, and it is my desire that the contributions to be taken here to-night will go war. the contributions to be taken here to-night will go far towards providing for the necessary expendi-tures in its behalf during the winter. 11 He then announced his text, 1st Cor. xiii, 11, in

"When I was a child, I spake as a child, I understood as a child, I thought as a child; but when I became a man, I put away childish things."

The analytical treatment of this text was comprehensive and beautiful. The apostle, he said, here spoke of two changes if first, a change in this life, and secondly, a change in the tife to come.

He proposed first to consider the change in this life, and secondly, a change in the tife to come.

He proposed first to consider the change in this life, when I was a child, I spake," etc. Surely, these were intensely interesting topics to begin with—the child, the man, and the difference between them. In examining them, he began with the infant. The infant of a week or two old, what a wonderful thing it was! Neither one of the famed seven wonders of the world, nor all of them combined, were, he said, as wonderful, nor helf as combined, were, he said, as wonderful, nor half as wonderful as a fine little child, an all-alive infant. wonderful as a fine little child, an all-alive infant. Behold it, said the speaker, [apparently bent upon his subject with the deepest philosophic interest.] There was in it no indication of hardihood or coarseness, or of power to take care of itself. In mute innocence, it simply claimed the attention of intelligent love. Its soft, delicate skin was ruddy with the perfect circulation of its rich red blood. So plump and round, it was dimpled all over. In taking it up, it must be handled with gentleness. It was, indeed, full of bones, but these were still in their grizzle, as Burke had once said of America! And then, its little lips, how delicately they were chaselled, and curled like the blushing petals of a rose! And if we kissed them, how soft and fragrant was its breath, and how glossy and silken its hair! This picture, as drawn by the preacher, was exceedingly graphic, and no doubt awakened a joyexceedingly graphic, and no doubt awakened a joy-ful response in many a mother's heart. We confess that the exquisite touches of Dr. Stockton's rhetorical brush invested the subject of babyhood with a merely the octor surface of that. The wonderful operation of the little lungs, heart, and whole internal viscera of the week or two old human breather was next referred to. The greatest wonder, however, was yet unnamed—the infant's sout. He had said, take up the baby gently; handla its body carefully, because that might perish; not so the soul. bady carefully, because that might perish; not so the soul.

But why had he said so much about the infant? some one might inquire. Paul said nothing about infants in the text; he speaks of the child that understands and speaks. A child, we must observe, speaks according to his understanding. To a little boy of five years, the house in which he lived, the street in which he played, or, perhaps, the city and its surrounding gardens, were the world. The sun and stars were, to him, no larger than they seemed to be. He looked not at things philosophically, but poetically; not like a man of learning, but like a savage. To him, what affected his plays and sweetmeats were the most important interests in the world. At that age, in fact, the child was no more than a playful little animal. Some mothers, he knew, expressed a wish that their darling little one, at this interesting period, might always remain so; yet nothing could be a greater mistake, and if those making the wish should be taken at their word, they would weep tears of blood over offspring dwarfed in mind and body through all their years. He, the preacher, had himself sometimes thought that he would give the world, if he had it to give, and if such a gift would avail, to be a boy again; not, however, to remain a boy, but to shape his course under the guidance of his present light, to a higher and nobler and.

But, having surveyed the world of childhood, he was next ready to look at the world of manhood. How was the scope of man's power and perception, compared with those of the child to the manly estate, the strides were wonderful beyond description. The difference between these estates was incalculably great—between the infant mind, which tate, the strides were wonderful beyond description. The difference between these estates was incalculably great—between the infant mind, which knows nothing but its toys, and the profound philosopher who by his intellectual power penetrates the dark mysteries of the universe.

This brought him to the third grand division of his subject, the difference between these estates, and their practical significance. What did this great distinction teach? Why, that the sainted spirit in the world to come shall be as much superior to the man in the flesh, as the man here is superior to the the world to some shall be as much superior to the man in the flesh, as the man here is superior to the child. Taking such instances as are afforded in the lives of Newton, Milton, and Chalmers, what a marvellous change was there between the child and the man! What a development of philosophy in the first, poetry in the second, and cloquence in the third! And yet, Newton in the flesh was not to be compared with Newton in heaven; and so of all the rest Another thought presented was, that if the "spirit of just men made perfect" conversed with each other, as they surely did, how much higher must be their thoughts, and understanding, and knowledge: The preacher's contemplative picture of the heavenly estate of man redeemed was such as only a mastermind could conceive and present. There, what we here called genius might be dulness, and what we called learning might be ignorance.

And what next? This: If we would pass on from manhood to sainthood—from mortal imperfection to immortal perfection—what must we do? Covet houses, and lands, and pleasures, or cherish selfishness and guile? No, no, never—away with such "childish things," said the preacher; they were not worthy of manhood, much less of saizthood. Then he pented his heavers to the better way! Charity, I. e. love, heavenly and divine, was what the fact that he was about to leave the cantaren of his school in charge of that congregation, he quoted the passage in which our Saviour repeats the in-quiry to Peter thrice, "Lovest thou me?" with the answer, "feed my lambs." "Three times were sufficient for Peter; how many times need #4 be told, feed my lambs?" was the pathetic appeal with which he classed. with which he closed.

The Capture of Mason and Sinden. The personal friends of Secretary Seward are confident that the remark made by him in his speech on Tuesday evening, in response to a serenade, that the country would within ten days be electrified by more welcome news than they have yet heard, referred to the probability that within that time the entire acquiescence of the British Government in the taking of Mason and Slidell would be received. It is believed that Lord Lyons has intimated to Mr. Seward that his Government will assure him that that they mean neutrality on board their vessels and

Col. Biddle on Army Appointments. To the Editor of The Press: Many comments have been made upon Col. Biddle's unfortuunto letter, but, so far as the observations of the writer have gone, no comparison of the real facts with the following passages has been made.

Among the charges which he makes against the

Administration are the following:

Administration are the following:

"Politicians were put at the head of troops—politicians who thought that to wear lace and feathers, and to pocket pay, was the whole duty of an officer. Feasting and frolicking and speech-making took the place of training and discipline, and while the officer spouted and revelled, the rank and file were robbed of their first right—the right to skilful guidance and instruction." * * * * *

"But," he adds, "the battle of Bull Run was not without its fruits for us. Panic-stricken selfishness seeking self-preservation, lighted on those who seeking self-preservation, lighted on those who could save it. The direction of the army passed into the hands of soldiers." The charges above made must refer, of course, to the generals, or those acting as such, appointed by the Administration at Washington; for as the regimental and company officers of volunteers were either elected by the soldiers or appointed by the Governors of the respective States, no fair-minded man could bring a charge against the President or his advisers, because of any incompetency on the part of such regimental and company officers. Neither could he hold them responsible for any want of ability on the part of those generals selected by Governors to command State troops, of whom there were many in the field during the term of service | Rd of the three-months men. Let us, then, briefly inquire how far the Administration did or did not "rob" our volunteers of ii their first right—the right to skilful guidance and instruction. The army of the Potomac, which engaged the enemy in his strong position at Bull Run, and had driven him a mile and a half when Johnston came up, was commanded by General McDowell-a gradered in a different and a better way. The best mode of testing this matter is by a reference to what a Democratic Administration did do when year of t last we were at war. Let us, then, turn to the days of President Polk and the Mexican war. Under the act of June 18, 1846, increasing the

The following were President Polk's appointments: Major generals, for regulars: Gideon J. Pillow, John A. Quitman, Thomas H. Benton (declined), William Cumming (declined). For volunteers: W. O. Butler and Robert Patterson. W. O. Butler and Robert Patterson.

Brigadier generals, for regulars: George Cadwalader, Franklin Pierce. For volunters: Enos D. Hopping, James Shields, Joseph Lane, Thomas Marshall, Thomas L. Harner, Caleb Cushing, Sterling Price, Jeff Davis (declined.)

Let it be asked, were not some of the foregoing generals "politicians," "put at the head of troops?" Of them, Generals Butler and Patterson, and Cols. Benton and Cumming, had been in the service about thirty years before, while Jeff Davis alone, of all the generals appointed during the war, had graditated at West Point. Sterling Price had, in the proceding January, defeated some wretched undisciplined rabble in New Mexico, and of the others, very much the larger portion knew not the elements of military science, and went into the field as generals to try and learn the went into the field as generals to try and learn the art of war.

During the operations of General Scott in the valley of Mexico, the life of that great chieftain alone stood between the popinjay and charlatan Pillow and the chief command of the army of Mexico. That this circumstance was a prognant Mexico. That this circumstance was a pregnant cause of care and anxiety to some of the oldest and best officers in that command the writer knows from undoubted authority. The death of General Scott might have resulted in the defeat of our arms and the disgrace of our country.

It is only necessary here to refer to the effort made by Mr. Polk to appoint Colonel Benton lieutenant general and place him over General Scott, and we need not go into particulars in regret to and we need not go into particulars in regard to the appointments in the new regular regiments. Suffice it to say that in the nine regiments of re-Suffice it to say that in the nine regiments of regular infantry added to the army during the Mexican war, but eleven graduates of West Point were appointed, while in the new regiments of artillery, cavelry, and infantry, raised during the present Administration, most of the prominent positions are held by officers of experience—including many graduates of West Point—while a fair proportion of the enptains are from the old army; and the Secretary of War has announced that the second lieutonants are to be selected from the meritorious rank and file of the regular and volunteer forces. Be it remembered, too, that most of the appointments exclusive of second lieutenants, which generally still remain open, were made before Bull Run had won him a mile and a half when Johnston came, was commanded by General McDowell—a grate of West Point—a soldier who were launels incut at Buena Vista—and who, at this hour, in spite of the misfortunes of July, is most deserved held in high esteem as an officer by those entited to judge.

ITNITED STATES, EASTERN DIS-TRICT OF PENNSYLVANIA. SCT.
THE PRESIDENT OF THE UNITED STATES,
O THE MARSHAL OF THE EASTERN DISTRICT OF PENNSYLVANIA,

The several divisions in that army were commanded by General Daniel Tyler, Colonel Datid Lunter, Colonel S. P. Heintzelman, General Theolore Runyon, and Colonel D. S. Miles; while the highest were under Colonel E. D. Keyes, General R. C. Schenek, Colonel W. T. Sherman, Colonel J. B. Richardson, Colonel A. B. Burnside, Colonel W. B. Franklin, Colonel O. B. Wilcox, Colonel O. G. Howard, Golonel L. Blenker, and Colonel T. A. Davies.

With the exception of General Runyon, a Democrat—appointed by the Governor of New Jersey to command Now Jersey troops—and General Schenek, a Republican, we believe there was not a politician among these officers; while the only ones above named not graduates of West Point were these two, Colonel Andrew Porter, à distinguishèd officer of the regular army of fifteen years' service, and Colonel Blenker, a soldier of high European reputation and experience.

The general Point of Generals Monafield, McDowell, Anderson, and Rosecvas; while the only ones above named not graduates of West Point were these two, Colonel Andrew Porter, à distinguishèd officer of the regular army of fifteen years' service, and Colonel Blenker, a soldier of high European reputation and experience.

The general Schenek would seem to be the only brigadier. Of these, Generals Fremont, Banks, Dix, and Butler, and, from the records, and furniture, and there to show, or allegs, it due to the next court day following, better cuses, if any they have a substantial political and colonel Blenker, a soldier of high European reputation and experience.

The genoral Schenek would seem to be the only brigadier. Of these, Generals Fremont, Banks, Dix, and Brigadier Generals Mansfeld, McDowell, Anderson, and Rosecvas and the colone of the capital o

Butler, and Schenek are not graduates of West Point; but Fremont and Dix had served with credit in the army at an earlier period; Banks is, as the writer knows, held in high esteem by regulars now serving under him, and Butler had previously acquired some reputation in this war.

WASHINGTON, July 16, 1861. IN THE ORPHANS' COURT FOR THE CITY AND COUNTY OF PHILADEL

Then he peinted his heavers to the batther way!
Charity, i. e. love, heavenly and divine, was what we wanted, and what food was waiting to give, as the pearl of great price to all who believe in the Lord Jerus, and trust implicitly in Him, by a living faith, for present and eternal suivation. Yes, love was the soul and essence of life eternal suivation. Yes, love was the soul and essence of life eternal; it was the distinguishing characteristic of God, of angels, and of true Christians. This was heaven on earth, and this was all of earth that could be borne to haven this was the attraction of the Cross and the splendor of the Throne.

His conclusion was touching and beautiful, and seemed sensibly to affect every heart. In view of the fact that he was about to leave the children of his school in charge of that congregation, he quoted the passage in which our Saviour repeats the internal survey of Peter thrice, "Lovest thou me?" with the answer, "feed my lambs." "Three times faced syllabelia, was specially for the school in charge of that congregation, he quoted the passage in which our Saviour repeats the instant.

From the Enaminer, Norfolk, Va. Cephalic Pills accomplish the object for which they were made, viz: Cure of headache in all its forms.

From the Enaminer, Novfolk, Va.
They have been tested in more than a thousand cases, with entire success. From the Democrat, St. Cloud, Mins.
If you are, or have been troubled with the headache, send for a box, [Cephalic Pills,] so that you may have them in case of an attack.

From the Advertiser, Providence, R. 1.

The Cephalic Pills are said to be a remarkably effective remedy for the headache, and one of the very best for that very frequent complaint which has ever been dis-

From the Western R. R. Gazette, Chicago, Ill.
We heartily endorse Mr. Spalding, and his unrivalled Cephalic Pills. From the Kanawha Valley Star. Kanawha, Ya. We are sure that persons suffering with the headsol who try tham, will stick to them.

From the Southern Path Finder, New Orleans, La.

Try them! you that are afflicted, and we are sure that your testimony can be added to the already numerous list that has received benefits that no other medicine can be added. From the St. Louis Democrat.

The immense demand for the article (Cephalic Pills) is rapidly increasing.

From the Gazette, Davenport, Iouc. Mr. Spalding would not connect his name with an ar-ticle be did not know to possess real merit. From the Advertiser, Providence, R. I.
The testimony in their favor is strong, from the most respectable quarters.

From the Daily News, Newport, R. I. Cephalic Pills are taking the place of all kinds. From the Commercial Bulletin, Boston, Mass. From the Commercial Cincinnati. Suffering humanity can now be relieved.
