SERENADE TO HON, JOHN J, CRITTENDEN. His Speech - The Country Must be Preserved. WASHINGTON, Dec. 9, 1861. The fine band attached to General King's Wisconsin brigade complimented Hon. John J. Crittenden with a screnade on Saturday night at his quarters, the National Hotel. A large crowd was Mr. Crittenden said:

Mr Frienden said:

Mr Frienden Si I have received so many compliments, and, what is of more value, so many kind evidences of respect from the people of Washington, that I am not surprised, as I otherwise should be, at the compliment you now pay me. But, fellow-citizens, I cannot make a speech. I have just finished a thresome journey, and have such a cold it is impossible for me to talk. And what do you want me to talk about? Your minds are all made up and your hearts are thoroughly in this great want me to talk about? Your minds are all made up and your hearts are thoroughly in this great struggle. Every manly quality in the heart of an American is perfectly determined upon its course. [Henr.] This great country must be preserved. It is the exemplar of the world, the best legacy we can leave our posterity. You are to be the fathers of the greatest race of men who ever inherited a government, if you are true to yourselves. Only be true to yourselves, and you cannot be false to any one. Fellow-citizens, I bid you good-night, with my grateful thanks for this mark of your kindness.

Three cheers and a "tiger" were given for the veteran statesman as he retired. Loud calls were reteran statesman as he retired. Loud calls were made for Senator Chandler, of Michigan; but he not making his appearance, Mr. Lovejoy, of Massachusetts, volunteered a few remarks, which were received in a good spirit.

received in a good spirit. Serenade to Governor Morton, of In-SPEECHES OF THE GOVERNOR, HON, MR. KELLOGG, HON. MR. COLPAN, HON. JOHN J. CRITTENDEN, AND SENATOR LANE, OF INDIANA. Shortly after the serenade to Mr. Crittenden, at the National Hotel, the band attached to the Nineteenth Indiana Regiment made its appearance at Brown's Hotel, a short distance off, where Gov. Oliver P. Morton, of Indiana, was stopping, and, after playing several patriotic airs, loud calls were made for the Governor, who was introduced from the balcony of the hotel to the multitude beneath

Constitution by obeying all its injunctions. The cause of free government never could be promoted by trampling on the Constitution itself. In our desire to put an end to the rebellion, we should not be betrayed into any intemperance of language or action. We should remember that the precedents of to-day become the history of the republic for all time to come. He was for maintaining the Constitution intact, and he would give every loyal man in the South his rights under the Constitution [Thunders of applause.] It was the duty of the Government to protect every loyal citizen of the United States, no matter what State he configure to the property of rebels in arms, and the confiscation of slaves meant, substantially, emancipation. Emancipation should always be accompanied by colonization, for otherwise it would be a curse alike to the white and black races. [Cheers.] He GENTLEMEN OF THE BAND OF THE NINETEENTH GENTLEMEN OF THE BAND OF THE NINETEENTH INDIANA REGIMENT: This tribute of your regard to night is peculiarly acceptable and grateful to me. I wish to say to you, to the other members of your regiment, and to all the Indiana troops upon the Potomac, that though absent from your state you have not been forgotten. The people of Indiana are watching over your welfare with the deepest solicitude. They have heard, with much alike to the white and black races. [Cheers.] He believed that every robel had forfeited all his rights under the Constitution which he sought to trample under foot. He had forfeited his rights to trample under foot. He had forfeited his rights to his house, his lands, and his property of every description; nay, more, he had forfeited the right to the very head upon his shoulders; but, in striking the rebel, we should be careful not to strike our friends. We should engage in no wild scheme of emancipation which would Africanize one-half of this wide Republic. [Cheers.] We should do no such thing as that, but we should guard the rights of the loyal citizens of the South, and all their rights. Much had been said about the negro question. The same treatment of that question, pain, that your regiment has been afflicted with sickness; but, on the other hand, they have received with delight the assurance of your spirit, your discipline, and your thirst for the contest. We claim that the State of Indiana, in this contest, stands in the front rank of the States that have done well in this war, but we ask no more than is due to the other loyal States. According to the doctrine of State rights, my friends, the citizen's first love is to his State, and the next question. The same treatment of that question, which was correct and proper from the foundation of the Government, was the correct and proper treatment for it to-night. His position upon the subject had been explained by a tall, good-looking old gentleman, at the other end of the avenue, in to his country, if he has any. Our first love is to our country, and our next to our State. I can as-sure you that in the State of Indiana, from which you have been absent some months, the determina-tion that this war shall be prosecuted to a success-ful termination is becoming deeper and more inten-sified from day to day. Not one disaster, nor twenty disasters, can abate the strength of that determina-tion. They can only increase it. I think I speak for the people of Indiana when I say that they will an annual message to Congress. He was for sus-taining the gallant Kentuckians and other loyal Southern men. [Cheers.] They had his opinions. He did not propose to preach a crusade of utter emancipation in the South. That was not what the war was for. It give the last dollar, and the last man, to bring about the restoration of this Union and the suppression of this rebellion. ["That's so," and cheers.] You have taken up arms in the holiest cause for which was for the preservation of the Union; to reunite again this great country; to shape the geography of a continent that God had intended should be remen have ever voluntarily left their homes and gone into the field. An attempt has been made, and is now being made, to destroy our Government, and, in doing that, to destroy republican institutions. The pretended Government that has been of a continent that God had intended should be bepresented by one flag, and should remain one land forever. In conclusion, Senator Lane drew a bright picture of the progress of the war, and the indications of its speedy and satisfactory termination. His remarks were received with the greatest enthusiasm, and, as he retired, he was greeted with six hearty cheers. tions. The pretended Government that has been set up in the seceded States can now scarcely be called republican in form, so little have the people to do with it; and this being so, we have the best evidence for saying that, should this rebellion be successful, a republican form of government will not prevail in the seceded States. I can, therefore, declare with perfect truth to-night, that republican institutions are now on trial before the world. If we are successful, they will be sustained; if not, they will not be sustained. An Appeal to the People of Pennsylvania for the Sick and Wounded Soldiers. Half a million of men have been summoned to arms in our loyal States, and nearly that number are already in the field, to maintain, at the hazard institutions are now on that before the weare successful, they will be sustained; if not, they will not be sustained.

This war, on the part of the North, has thus far been maintained for the suppression of rebellion and the restoration of the Union; and I trust, that for this purpose, it will be prosecuted in the fature. While we hold ourselves at perfect liberty to resort to the use of any means known to the laws of civitized warfare, in order to suppress rebellion and relized warfare, in order to suppress rebellion and re-store the Union, we should, at the same time, be careful to abstain from the use of any means which, from the nature of the case, might make the restoration of the Union impossible. [Good," and cheers.] contest. The loyal people of this nation have the power, and they have a just cause, which, of itself, is greater than all else. It were to doubt the final success of truth and justice to doubt our ultimate triumph. Many sacrifices must be made, much precious blood must be spilled, and wast treasure expended, but all these things will be accorded cheerfully by the people of this country for the preservation of the Union and our republican institutions. I am happy to say that in the West, from which I come, the prospect is much brighter than it was even a few weeks ago. We can now consider Kentucky as redeemed. Her people have, by overwhelming majorities, pronounced in favor of the Union, and I believe, if no disaster occurs—and I see no cause why disaster should occur—that in a few weeks Kentucky will be relieved from the pre-Union, and I believe, if no disaster occurs—and I see no cause why disaster should occur—that in a few weeks Kentucky will be relieved from the presence of an enemy, and that even Tennessee will be rescued from the jaws of this rebullion and rustored to loyalty. ["Good," and cheers.] The same may be said of Missouri. Maryland is now safe in the folds of the Union. [A voice—"That's so, I am from Maryland," and applause.]

There is this to be remarked, that whatever ground we have acquired we have maintained. We have not gone back. The satisfactory evidences are also manifest that in every Secession State, except, perhaps, South Carolina, [I voice—"D—n South Carolina,"] there is an ardent, loyal Union feeling, which only requires a little nourishment to show itself in greater force. [Cheers.] It exists in North Carolina, in Georgia, in Alabaina, in Louisiana, and I believe even in South Carolina herself, though there is less of it there than anywhere else. In point of fact, the heart of South Carolina never was in this Union. ["That's so."] She had more tories within her limits during the Revolution than all the other colonies put together, and that spirit of toryism which then prevailed there has ripeped into this great rebellion in the year 1861.

It is incumbent upon the people of this country to make up their minds that great sacrifices are yet to be made. This war is no holiday affair. It has already acquired extraordinary dimensions. Ten months ago we had a little army of fiftaan thousand men, and now we have an army numbering nearly seven hundred thousand men, which has sprung up almost in a night. Such a spectacle was never hefore seen. Great armies have been raised in France and other European countries, but not upon the same principle as ours. They have been raised by conscription, by sheer force of they have shrunk from no danger, and, I believe, have thus far met with no reverse. ["Bally," and great applause I Thanking you very kindly for the compliment you have paid me, I bid you good-night.

Mr. Kellog. of Illinois, was next introduced. He said: That if there was any man present who despaired of the Union, he had not one word to say to him. [Cries of "Nobody does," "He ain't about," &c.] Although it might cost treasure, and the blood of valiant men, to restore harmony in our country, he knew—as he lived he knew it would be restored. ["That's so!" "you're right."] In relation to the slavery question, he had declared on a hundred stumps that if it was a blessing to the slave Sinites let them have it. ["Good," and cheers.] If it was a curse, as he believed it was a curse, it was their own, and let them keep it. ["Bully for you."] What he desired to do, was to march our armies vigorously and strongly, to throw their power on the white rebels, and when our armies marched he would let the negro regu Mr. Kellogg, of Illinois, was next introduced. ["Bully for you."] What he desired to do, was to march our armies vigor.nsly and strongly, to throw their power on the white rebels, and when our armies marched he would let the negro regulate himself. [Laughter and cheers.] That was all he wanted to do with the negro. He did not swant him to come to his State, because he wanted the Southern States to have the peculiar institution that they loved so much in all its phases. The war had been proclaimed to save the Union, not to destroy it. Abraham Lincoln was an honest man, and he had taken an oath to sustain the Constitution and the laws of the land and the Union and and he had taken an oath to sustain the Constituand ne had taken an oath to sussuit the Constitu-tion and the laws of the land, and the Union and Constitution could not be sustained without protect-ing States, for States made the Union. The policy of the Government, therefore, was not to attack a State institution, because it would be a violation of the Constitution. [Applause.] He would sacrifice millions of men and of treasure to carry the war to the hearthstone of every rebel to save the Government, but he would hold inviolate and intact the rights of every loyal man, and every State under the Constitution; and he would guaranty, as we were bound to do, to every State a republican form of government. raised in France and other European countries, but not upon the same principle as ours. They have been raised by conscription, by sheer force of law; our army is an army of love. The men who compose it have come from their homes and families to serve their country. I can truly say that such a spectacle was never before witnessed in the history of the world, and I can safely predict that such an army will ultimately be triumphant. Wa are engaged in a common cause, and we must make common sacrifices. Those who have gone to the field will be loved and remembered and cared for by those who remain at home. We have confided friends in the army, and expose them to special privations and suffering, it is for their friends at home, who are watching over them, to fly to their relief, with their oil and wine, and with hands ready to supply what is needed, and to ward off what is threatened. Let science and skill step in, too, for prevention and cure, where military agencies have failed. Let the soldier feel that we, who are at home, have not forgotten those who are in the field; that our eyes are watching for their welfare; that our hands are ready to supply what is deficient; that our purses are open to sustain every agency which specially regards his health and comfort. Let the soldier know that the national heart feels for him, and that the national hand is beneath him; and let him know that the prayers of the people constantly ascend to the God of all grace for his success in arms and his welfare, temporal and eternal.

They have hesitated in the performance of no duty;

Although the objects and labors of the Sanitary Commission were, from the beginning, fully known to, and expressly sanctioned by, the President, the Secretary of War, the Commander-in-chief, and many other officers of the army, the whole expense has been borne by private contribution. The commission has not drawn upon the public treasury, but upon the generous sympathies of the country to defray the heavy expenses they have incurred. It is believed that the moral effect upon the army of these spontaneous offerings and their judicious application will far more than repay all the sacrifices which have been made. views, and these he intended to deciare and vote in Clagress.

Mr. Colfax, of Indiana, was loudly called for, and responded in a few appropriate remarks. He had no desire to conceal his sentiments. He could give them in a single sentence—that the war should be pressed vigorously, efficiently, energetically—that our blows should fall upon the rebels thick, fast, and hard, with all our strength, all our might, and all our souls. He thought that thus this gigantic rebellion, which has convulsed the country with its horrors of civil war, could be put down. He acknowledged the obligations of old Kentucky. Sha had Indiana's troops in thousands within her limits. He had been in their camps, and they were all good soldiers distinguished for their manly deportment and discipline. Indeed, all our troops were a model of order and efficiency. It was no army made up of the refuse of the population, but an army of citizen soldiers. As had well been said, such a spectacle had never before been witnessed of a Government raising an army of over 600,000 men inside of these months, and every man a volunteer. He saw no hope of escape from the embarrassments and disasters which hung over our glorious country except by following the clue of the Constitution. We could only preserve the constitution by obeying all its injunctions. The cause of free government never could be promoted public buildings, tearing up railroads, cutting timbers of bridges nearly through, leaving them stand-ing as pitfalls to precipitate trains and passengers into water-gulphs beneath, poisoning wells, springs, and provisions, endeavoring to bring Indians into he field, lying immeasurably, and bragging more Forbearance is no longer a virtue, but a positive fault. The condition of the Indians is a proof of it; constant war would be the consequence. The result would be that one section would conquer and subdue the other. There can be no doubt which would succeed. We desire amity, equality, and unity. If separated the South would be devastated and made a servile colony. It would not be ordinary war, but the Southern pretenders who have usurped control there would exterminated. The masses of the Southern peo-

COMMITTER OF THE MORTE. LETTER BAGS lapse of a few weeks launched us into a con-test of proportions so vast as to place it among the greatest of modern times. Officers and soldiers thus unexpectedly called into military service, having, for the most part, everything to learn pertaining to their new position, its duties and dangers, now realize a truth too little known or felt apprecting armies, that the diseases incident to camps and soldiers' life are far more deadly foes than sword and fire-arms.

It is sad to think that while the soldier is undergoing all the saverity of military discipline to perve MARINE INTELLIGENCE.

It is sad to think that while the soldier is undergoing all the severity of military discipline to nerve his arm for a trial of strength and courage, a host of enemies is gathering round him against which strength and courage avail nothing. Our soldiers are too new in the camp to have learned how to meet such assaults or how to avoid them. We who are safe at home, surrounded by all the comforts of domestic life and all the appliances of medical skill, must think and act for men thus exposed; we must send the forces required for their defense against these dreaded enemies. these dreaded enemies. For every soldier in the field there should be a dozen voluntoers male and female at home ready for any work or service necessaryto maintain our armies in the fullest possible efficiency. It is for us of the home forces to provide the means and devise the measures that may be effectual in aiding the proper authorities and officers to put the many deadly diseases which hover round the camps to flight.

It was this thought which inspired Florence Nightingale and sent her to the Crimea; it is this thought which now inspires thousands of female hearts and sets their fingers at work for their defenders in the field; it is this thought which prompted the generous and enlightened men who originated and organized the Sanitary Commission, which we now appeal to you to uphold by your personal efforts and contributions.

The soldier has committed himself to the guardianship of others; he can make no provision for himself. He incurs all the risk of incompetent and careless officers; and it would be expecting too much if, in the hastily assembled levies of our armies, some officers had not found a place who may prove too careless, too inert, or too ignorant to take proper precautions and measures for the comfort and health of their men. Even in the best regulated European armies this criminal negligence and disregard of the soldier's life and welfare are found, and it officers of armies long trained to their duties fail, as we know they failed cruelly in the Crimea, how much more should we apprehend danger where officers and men fresh from civil life are alike without experience? In the beginning of this campaign we know that soldiers suffered for want of food, because those whose business it was did not know how to draw and furnish the daily rations. Prepared only from the Original Prescription of the late PROFESSOR MUTTER.

AT FREDERICK BROWN'S,

Northeast corner of FIFTH and CHESTNUT Streets, Philadelphia.

This Bemedy is a safe and simple preparation from the receipt of the late distinguished Professor Mutter, with Whom it was a favorite prescription. That he used it in his extensive practice, insures to the timid a cortain proof of its pure and innoxlous elements, and to those who know his character for skill and careful attention, to prescribe only such remedial agents as should secure restoration without producing subsequent evil, it will be welcomed as a real good. Under the guidance of a Physician (to whom its combination will unlesistatingly be made known), it will always be found very beneficial, and in cases where a medical adviser is not at hand, it may be used with safety, according 'to the directions, in all cases of short or long duration. PURE COD-LIVER OIL The repugnance of most patients to COD-LIVER OIL, and the inability of many to take it at all, has induced various forms of disguise for its administration that are familiar to the Medical Profession. Some of them answer in special cases, but more often the vehicle neutralizes the usual effect of the Oil, proving quite as unpalatable and of less therapeutic value. The repugnance, nausea, &c., to invalids, induced by disguat of the Oil, is entirely obviated by the use of our CAPSULES, COD-LIVER OIL CAPSULES have been much used lately in Europe, the experience there of the good results from their use in both bospital and private practice, aside from the naturally suggested advantages, are sufficient to warrant our claiming the virtues we do for them, tevling ussured their use will result in benefit and deserved favor. THE PENNSYLVANIA CENTRAL RAILROAD. THE CAPACITY OF THE ROAD IS NOW EQUAL TO ANY IN THE COUNTEY.

THREE THEOUGH PASSENGEB TRAINS
BETWEEN PHILADELPHIA AND PITTSBURG.
Connecting direct at Philadelphia with Through Trains from Boston, New York, and all points East, and in the Union. Depot at Pittsburg with Through Trains to and from all points in the West, northwest, and Southwest—thus furnishing facilities for transportation of Passengers unsurpassed for speed and comfort by any other route.

Express and Fast Lines run through to Pittsburg, without change of Cars or Conductors. All Through Passenger Trains provided with Loughridge's Patent Brake—speed under perfect control of the engineer, thus adding much to the safety of travellers.

Smoking Cars are attached to each Train; Wood-ruff's Sleeping Cars to Express and Fast Trains. The EXPRESS EUNS DAILY: Mail and Fast Lines Sundays excepted.

Fare always as low, and time as quick, as by any other route.

For further information apply at the Passenger Station, Southeast corner of Eleventh and Market streets.

The completion of the Western connections of the Pennsylvania Bailroad to Chicago, make this the DIRECT LINE BETWEEN THE EAST AND THE GREAT WEST.

The connection of tracks by the Railroad Bridge at Pittaburg, avoiding all drayage or ferriage of Freight together with the saving of time, are advantages readily appreciated by Shippers of Freight, and the Travelling Fublic.
