FROM HIS HONOR JUDGE STRONG ! October 26, 1861. Meara, KAY & Brothers—Gaullamen: I have examined for Coul's work. A good book upon that subject is needed by the profession, in consequence of the great changes which modern legislation has made in most of the United States. So far as I have been able to examine Mr. Gord's book; Ferre of opinion that he has done his worfs with influstry, system, and indemnat. I think his work will supply a roal need.
Yours, Very Respectfully;
W. STRONG.

[FROM ITIS HONOR JUNGE WOODWARD.] Messus Kay & Brother—
Gentlemen: On taking up M2. Cord's book; I was struck with the comprehensiveness of the author's plan. To state fully the doctrines of the common law touching the marriage relation, and to exhibit the modifications of the common law which have been mide by the statutes and judenial decisions of the several Stabes of the Unionsywas a large undertaking. I think Mr. Cord has performed it well; the hest collected and arranged the Penneylvania statutes and decisions with singular fidelity. The very latest of our decisions will be found cited in his note to the statutes. The points decided are brickly but accusvery latest of our decisions will be found cited in hits notes to the statutes. The points decided are britely but accurately stated. If his notes on the statutes of other States are as full and accurate as they are on those of Pennsylvania, this part of the work will be found exceedingly valuable and convenient. * * * Mr. Cord deserves the thanks of the profession and the public, for the very satisfactory manner in which he has brought before us both the common and statute law of the marilal relation. I cordially recommend his book to the patronage of the profession. The work is brought out in a style that is highly credi-
